TO HIT TOBACCO TRUST BY TAXING

McReynolds Proposes Graduated Internal Revenue Rates, Based on Production.

MIGHT SAVE INDEPENDENTS

Drastic Action Needed, as Officials Hold Dissolution Decree Legalized Trust's New Status.

MAY ATTACK OIL TRUST, TOO

Special Agents Report on Their Investigations of the Standard's Present Methods.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 3.—In an effort to reach the different concerns which made up the former Tobacco Trust and are charged by independent companies with continuing their system of unfair and ruinous competition, Attorney General McReynolds intends to ask the Finance Committee of the Senate to amend the tariff bill so as to provide a graduated internal revenue tax on the production of the manufacturers, this tax to increase with the increased output of the factories. It is believed that by means of this change the independent tobacco manufacturers will be able to compete with the larger concerns which were formerly part of the combination.

It is stated that Mr. McReynolds holds that as a result of the so-called friendly decree dissolving the Tobacco Trust the trust was legalized in effect, and that the evils which caused the prosecution under the Taft Administration are now being continued in a different way. Mr. McReynolds, who was a special assistant to Attorney General Wickersham in the prosecution, disapproved of the dissolution decree and was not a party to it.

Independents Say Ruin is Near.

Since the new Administration came into power it has been besought by the independent tobacco men, who assert that the tobacco concerns that were formerly part of the American Tobacco Company are driving them out of business. The independents say they can hold out only a short while, unless the Government comes to the rescue. To wait for the courts to act, it is said, would involve too much delay.

The drastic proposition of Mr. McReynolds is designed to save time; it does not fit in well with the Democratic idea of using the taxing power for no other purpose than for raising revenue, but, as against that objection, it is argued that this is an emergency situation, which calls for radical treatment, and that in no other way can speedy relief be obtained from the conditions resulting from the recent dissolution of the Tobacco Trust.

Senator Cummins and others attacked the dissolution decree after it came out and sought to get Congress to order an appeal, but the Taft Administration declined to take this of its own initiative. The friends of the present Administration admit that appeal is now impossible, and that in an attack on the trust through a new suit the Government would be estopped by the decree already entered.

Practically the entire time of the Cabinet to-day was given up to considering whether the surface conditions in the tobacco trade warranted the Attorney General in beginning an investigation to decide whether the decree of dissolution was being violated and how.

Mr. McReynolds has been studying the workings of the decree ever since he entered the Cabinet. It is known that he disagreed with the former Attorney General as to the adequacy of the plan of disintegration, as finally adopted, criticising especially the pro rata distribution among shareholders of the stock of the fourteen corporations into which the American Tobacco Company was divided.

Oil Trust Under Suspicion.

By a singular coincidence the Attorney General received to-day from Charles B. Morrison and Oliver E. Pagan, special assistants, a report of their investigations of conditions in the oil industry, and began to study the question whether the facts would justify the beginning of contempt or criminal proceedings on charges of violations of the dissolution decree. This question was still unsettled to-night.

This report is the result of several months of inquiry. Messrs. Morrison and Pagan stated in a report made to Wickersham just before he retired from office that their investigation up to that time had raised a serious doubt as to whether the Oil Trust has been dissolved, though they found that unfair competition had been eliminated.

The last few months of their investigation have been largely devoted to an inquiry whether the management of the disintegrated parts of the trust and the control of oil prices were still directed by the same interests as previously.

DUFFY AFRAID OF FRIDAY.

Policeman to be Tried as Graft Collector Watching Trial Date.

District Attorney Whitman announced yesterday that he was ready for the trial of Police Sergeant Peter J. Duffy, one of the alleged graft collectors of ex-Inspector Dennis Sweeney. The trial will be called before Justice Goff in the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court this morning.

It developed yesterday, however, that Abraham Levy, counsel for Duffy, was busy with another criminal case in the Court of Special Sessions, and that this case could not be completed yesterday before adjournment of court. Mr. Levy told Mr. Whitman that he would ask for a postponement for at least a day on this account, and it is understood that Mr. Whitman will make no objection.

Duffy, it was learned, has no objection to starting the trial on Thursday, but is very much afraid of having it begun on Friday. The trial of ex-Patrolman John J. Hartigan, it was recalled, began on a Friday and ended in a two-and-a-half-year sentence to Sing Sing.

CARRY WATER 37 FLIGHTS.

Incident of Dispute Over Privilege in the Woolworth Building.

Supreme Court Justice Giegerich yesterday gave the Broadway-Park Place Company, which operates the Woolworth Building, until Monday to make its reply to the charge of giving a monopoly to the Virginia Bear Water Company of the business of supplying water to tenants. The plaintiffs in the suit are the Friesdedt Underpinning Company, which has rooms on the thirty-eighth floor of the Woolworth Building, and the Pine Hill Crystal Spring Company.

The suit began with an application made a week ago by James A. Beha, representing the plaintiffs, to the Supreme Court to enjoin the Broadway-Park Place Company from discriminating against the Pine Hill Crystal Spring Company. This water concern, it was charged, had been forbidden to use the elevators, and the water it has sold to tenants in the building had been carried by employes up the stairs. A daily ascent of the thirty-seven flights to the office of the Friesdedt Underpinning Company has been made by men carrying large bottles of spring water. According to the complaint, more than forty other tenants, who buy water from other concerns than the Virginia Bear Water Company, have their bottles of water carried up every day from two to thirty flights of stairs. The longest trip of these water-bearers is that of thirty-seven stories, and this, according to Mr. Beha, takes more than an hour to make.

The application for an injunction alleges that the Virginia Bear Water Company gives 40 per cent. of its gross sales to the corporation which runs the building, in return for the exclusive use of the elevators.

Charles E. F. McCann, counsel for the Broadway-Park Place Company, denied yesterday that there was any 40 per cent. arrangement, but admitted that the company running the building received a share of the sales from the Virginia Bear Water Company. Mr. McCann said, however, that the Pine Hill Crystal Spring Company made a bid for the exclusive use of the elevators, and offered an even larger share of the sales than that now received from the other company. Mr. McCann added that the arrangement was for the benefit of tenants rather than for the profit there was in it, and that a monopoly of the drinking water business existed on similar terms in every large building in the city.

MISS WILSON A LOBBYIST.

Tariff Expert So Classifies Her In Jest Full of Praise.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, June 3.—When in this city yesterday Miss Margaret Wilson, daughter of the President, promised to use her influence to have the property of the Naval Home on Gray's Ferry Avenue turned over to the city for public playground and park purposes. That was asserted by Richard Campion, tariff expert, to constitute lobbying, the offense assailed by the President as pernicious when many [illegible] evoking the ear of members of Congress to give their views on the Underwood schedules.

"Now, don't misunderstand me," said Mr. Campion. "I think Miss Wilson is justified in using her influence in having so desirable an object as the transfer of this property attained. I hope she succeeds—we all do—but to do this she must commit the very offense which her father, the President, attacked recently as insidious when applied to legislation of another character. She becomes a lobbyist.

"If this fair and most excellent daughter of the President gets this bill through, we will all praise her efforts and laud her skill, but why is it right to lobby for playgrounds and wrong to lobby for the protection of great industries that give employment to millions and sustain thousands of families?"

REBELS TAKE MATAMORAS.

Capture Mexican Town After a Nine-Hour Battle.

BROWNSVILLE, Texas, June 3.—While a few men still were offering firm resistance to the rebel troops of Gen. Lucio Blanco, Constitutionalist Commander in Chief of the State of Tamaulipas, at 10 o'clock to-night, Matamoras, Mexico, practically was in the hands of the revolutionists after a battle waged without interruption since 10:30 o'clock this morning.

Col. Escharcerta, with 100 volunteers, remnants of the Federal garrison, was making the last stand from the roof of the cathedral and theatre in Hidalga Plaza, but his subjection before morning was regarded as certain.

Early in the night flames in several parts of the city lighted the sky for miles and for a time it was feared the town was doomed. At 10 o'clock, however, the fire zones had decreased.

The toll of death on both sides was heavy. Major Estaban Ramos, Federal commander, was wounded early in the engagement. He was brought to a Brownsville hospital. His condition is reported as critical. Private Davies of the United States Cavalry was wounded by a stray shot when patrolling the border on the American side of the Rio Grande. Rumors were persistent that Miguel Barragan, Mayor of Matamoras, was shot and killed late to-day. That could not be confirmed.

MEXICO CITY, June 3.—President Huerta issued a decree to-day, in conformity with the recent action of Congress, fixing Oct. 26 as the date of the elections.

HUNT STANDARD ATTORNEYS

None Visible at Opening of Texas $99,000,000 Ouster Suit.

CORSICANA, Texas, June 3.—An argument as to whether any associates of Standard Oil attorneys were present opened the hearing, which began here to-day, to take testimony in the State's suit to heavily fine the Standard Oil Companies of New York and New Jersey, and certain stockholders of those companies, and to fine and oust from Texas the Corsicana Petroleum Company and the Magnolia Petroleum Company, both of Corsicana. The two Texas companies were represented by counsel, but no special counsel appeared to represent the Standard. John D. Rockefeller, John D. Archbold, or other individuals against whom a judgment for almost half of the $80,000,000 penalties was sought. George C. Greer of Beaumont, a defendant, who is also an attorney in the case, said he did not represent the Standard. The State excepted to this statement. S. W. Marshall of Dallas, also denied appearing for the Standard.

Attorneys admitted that the bulk of stock of the Magnolia Petroleum Company was owned by John D. Archbold and H. C. Folger, Jr., of New York, as the State's petition asserted, but they said that Mr. Archbold and Mr. Folger held this stock merely as individuals, and that the defense would try to prove that these and other stockholders had neither violated any anti-trust laws or attempted to monopolize the oil business in Texas.

FIND EDITOR GUILTY IN PATERSON TRIAL

"Hostility to Government" Is Proved Against Scott, Who Inflamed Strikers.

CALL 44 TO BAR AT ONCE

Police Accuse Them of Unlawful Assemblage—Girl Picket Included in the Number.

Special to The New York Times.

PATERSON, N. J., June 3.—Alexander Scott, managing editor of The Passaic Weekly Issue, a Socialist publication, who has made many speeches to the Paterson silk mill strikers, was convicted this afternoon of writing and publishing an editorial article in his paper advocating "hostility to government," a crime under the statutes of New Jersey. Scott will be sentenced on Friday and Judge Klenert may fine him $2,000 or send him to prison for a maximum of fifteen years, or both. It is considered certain that Judge Klenert will not impose a maximum sentence, for the jury recommended mercy in the case.

Since the great silk-mill strike, which is conducted by the Industrial Workers of the World, started nearly four months ago Scott has been prominent among the agitators. His paper in every issue has been full from the first to the last page with articles, editorial and otherwise, praising the I. W. W. and its methods, and denouncing the silk-mill owners and the Paterson authorities, particularly the police. The number of The Issue that caused the indictment of Scott and his conviction to-day was a "Strike Special," and was printed and circulated on Friday, Feb. 28 last.

As soon as the Jury in the Scott case retired, which was precisely at noon to-day, Prosecutor Dunn called the cases of forty-three men and one girl, who were jointly indicted for unlawful assembly. Conviction for this offense may entail a prison sentence of from one to three years. The forty-four decided to be tried together. The result was that the State had to prosecute a single case in which more defendants appeared than ever before in the history of New Jersey. The attorneys for the defense said as soon as the jury was struck that every one of the defendants would take the stand before the defense rested.

Quick Trial for Scott.

The trial of Scott was one of the quickest in the history of Passaic County. The jury was drawn late yesterday afternoon. The taking of testimony began at 10 o'clock this morning. The case was given to the hands of the jury at [illegible] o'clock this afternoon Scott heard the jury announce that he was guilty of the offense charged in the indictment.

In opening for the State the Assistant Prosecutor, Munson Force, referred to the assassination of President McKinley and of the subsequent enactment because of it that treaty of law under which Scott had been indicted. Mr. Force said the statute was enacted to prevent just such hostility to the law as the State charged Scott was guilty of in writing the editorial article called "Bimson the Boss Strikebreaker," which was the leading expression of opinion in The Issue of Feb. 28.

As soon as Mr. Force concluded Henry Carless of counsel for Scott arose and said that the defense would admit that Scott had written the article complained of, and that it was Scott who had it published. Mr. Carless said he was willing to save the State the trouble of having to prove the authorship of the article.

The article in question was then read in evidence by Mr. Force, in part as follows:

The police of Paterson, headed by their brave Chief Bimson, have taken charge of Paterson and are running things to suit themselves. The hails of striking mill workers are raided, their meetings broken up, and helpless men, women, and children are brutally clubbed, cuffed, and manhandled right on the streets.

The mill workers of Paterson struck against the four-loom system which is grinding out their health and lives. They peacefully walked out of the mills and quit work. For doing this terrible thing the police of Paterson, at the behest of the manufacturers, rushed at the defenseless workers like a bunch of drunken Cossacks and savagely attacked them. Outside of barbarous Mexico and Russia there are few places that have witnessed such police brutality and lawlessness.

Called Police Anarchists.

Paterson was one famous as the City of the Reds, the home of anarchists. These anarchists talked a whole lot and made some noise, but they never harmed a hair on any one's head. Now Paterson has become infamous as the City of the Clubs, the hotbed of brass-buttoned anarchists. These police anarchists, headed by the boss anarchist, Bimson, not only believe in lawlessness, but they practice it. They don't waste words with workingmen—they simply crack their heads. With them might is right. They swing the mighty club in the right hand, and if you don't like it you can get the hell out of Paterson. This is anarchism of the worst kind.

The police of Paterson are doing themselves proud as strikebreakers. Chief Bimson is priding himself on the fact that he has nipped the strike in the bud by spilling the blood of the mill workers. The Paterson police have become professional strikebreakers. The workers of Paterson pay the salaries of the police, and yet their hired servants turn upon them as strikebreakers. Will the workers of Paterson stand for this?

Suppose the manufacturers locked out the workers and closed their factories until the workers were almost starved to death. Would the police of Paterson rush into the rooms of the Silk Manufacturers' Association, break up their meetings, and crack the fat skulls of the manufacturers? Not so you could notice it. Why? Because money talks. And money owns the City of Paterson, including the police.

The editorial then refers to police affairs in New York, saying that the police in New York in the past had been handy with their clubs during strikes just as the Paterson police were, and continues:

This newspaper is for the working class. It will fight for them and back them up through thick and thin. The strike of the mill workers of Paterson is a matter between them and the manufacturers. Let the Paterson police keep their hands off. This is our final word to them.

Only two witnesses were called, both by the State. The first was James W. Parker, business manager of the company that prints The Issue, under contract. He said the company printed The Issue of Feb. 28. He identified the number in question and it was admitted in evidence.

The second witness was Police Captain John Tracy. He said that he was at a meeting of the strikers on Feb. 28 and that in the course of a speech made at that time Scott read the editorial article

HAMERSLEY ESTATE GOES TO MALE HEIR

Trust of $7,000,000 Created in 1883 Upheld by the Court of Appeals.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, June 3.—The Court of Appeals handed down a decision to-day sustaining the validity of the trust in the will of Louis C. Hamersley, who died in 1888, leaving an estate which now amounts to $7,000,000. It refused to approve the contention of the executors of the will of Lily Warren Beresford, formerly Duchess of Marlborough, that the trust was void as violating the law against perpetuities in confining the succession to the male issue. The Duchess first was the wife of Hamersley. She afterward was married to the Duke of Marlborough, and then to Lord William Beresford.

Hamersley left a will, which was probated in New York County in 1886, by which he gave a life estate to his wife, who was twenty-five years old at the time of his death. The remainder, on the death of the wife, was to go to any male descendant of Hamersley, and if there was none to his cousin, J. Hooker Hamersley and to his male descendants. In default of such descendants the estate was to go to charity as elected by the widow.

Lady William Beresford died a few years ago without having made any disposition as to the estate's charitable uses. Hamersley left no son, but J. Hooker Hamersley died before the widow, leaving a son, Louis Gordon Hamersley, the defendant in the action, who claimed the principal of the trust. There were two daughters of J. Hooker Hamersley and other collateral relatives of the testator who demanded shares in the estate on the ground that the trust was invalid and that the property should be distributed among the heirs, as if Louis C. Hamersley had died intestate.

The action was for an accounting. It was begun by the executors of the will of the former Duchess. The issue of the validity of the trust was raised. The suit was tried before a referee, James L. Bishop, who held the trust valid and directed that it be turned over to the New York Life Insurance and Trust Company as guardian for Louis Gordon Hamersley. Mr. Bishop's decision was affirmed by the Appellate Division, Second Department, and now has been upheld by the State's highest court.

On Mr. Hamersley's death in 1883 the will originally was attacked by the relatives of his mother, who as Sarah Mason had brought to her husband the old John Mason Chemical Bank fortune. The Masons, however, accepted $110,000 and agreed not to reopen the contest in the life of Mrs. Hamersley, who had then become the Duchess of Marlborough.

Mrs. Hamersley, to whom the life interest in the estate was left, originally was Miss Lillian Warren Price of Troy. It was said after her death that she was a woman who married "a man for his fortune, a Duke for his title, and a hero for love."

Lady William Beresford, as she then was, died on Jan. 11, 1909. The Hamersley estate had increased in value in her hands, and she took every legal precaution before her death to make sure that her son, William Beresford, should inherit from her the addition in value to the estate since her husband's death.

The estate contest was reopened a few months later, when a suit was filed in behalf of young Beresford asking for an accounting from the New York Life Insurance and Trust Company of 52 Wall Street of certain interests which had accrued to him from his mother's clever handling of the property. Louis Gordon Hamersley, who, being the only son of J. Hooker Hamersley, under the will had become the sole heir, was one of the defendants in Beresford's suit. All others who might inherit shares in the estate if the will were broken also became defendants.

The claimants represented many of the best-known families in New York society, including the Cuttings, Masons, Fosts, Iselins, Wissmans, Carneses, Jaines, Youngs, Langdons, Blagdens, and Fearings. The legal array was one of the largest and strongest ever seen at a single trial. It was said that only one prominent law firm failed to participate in the case.

The case was given to James L. Bishop as referee, and he adjudged the whole estate to be Louis Gordon Hamersley's. The ground for attacking the validity of the will was that it attempted to suspend the power of alienation beyond two lives, in violation of the New York law. That contention, however, was denied in the courts.

HOTEL EVICTS MRS. GRACE.

Learned She Was Not the Wife of C. H. Oldham.

Special to The New York Times.

DOWNINGTON, Penn., June 3.—Mrs. Daisie Ulrich Opie Grace, who was tried and acquitted on the charge of shooting her husband in Atlanta, Ga., yesterday was evicted from a hotel in Downingtown, Penn., after the proprietor had learned that she was not the wife of Charles H. Oldham, who was also at the hotel. To-day Mrs. Grace denied complicity in a situation wherein she might be criticised, and declared that she intended to be married to Mr. Oldham as soon as she obtained a divorce from Grace.

Oldham is business Manager of the Chester Valley Electric Company. He arrived at the Swan Hotel, Downington, about two months ago, and shortly after was joined by a woman who was known as Mrs. Oldham. A week or so ago Grace arrived [illegible] the hotel another woman declared she was collecting historical data. She became quite friendly with the Oldhams. She was a detective, said to be in the employ of Grace, and was responsible for the fact becoming known that Mrs. Grace was not Oldham's wife.

The pair left the hotel immediately, as requested.

BURIED TO HER NECK IN JAMAICA BAY BOG

Old Mrs. Smith, Weighted with a Little Brown Jug, Had Been There All Night.

Gilbert Baylis, who lives on Three-Mile Creek, an arm of Jamaica Bay, was leaving his home to go to work about 9 o'clock yesterday morning when he heard faint cries coming from the bay. He made his way in the direction whence the cries came and presently, splashing ankle deep in mud and water, found himself on the outskirts of the marshes of the Jamaica Bay meadows. There, sunk almost to her neck in the slime and quicksand, he saw an old woman, feebly splashing about in the dark water with one arm, while with the other she hugged tightly to her a small brown jug. The jug, too, although she held it high, was partly submerged in the dark slime.

"Give me your jug; the weight of it is pulling you down," shouted Baylis.

The old woman turned her face toward him, and her small eyes twinkled with sudden life.

"No, Sir, I will not," she snapped shrilly. "It's been with me all night, and if I'm never going to get out of this place I'm going to take it down with me."

Baylis made his way back to solid ground, and, calling several neighbors, managed, with their help, to stretch a few planks across the ditch and, after an hour's struggle, to drag the old woman upon them and out of the quagmire. She was too exhausted to walk. They carried her to a small boathouse, near by.

She insisted that she would presently regain her strength and be able to walk home and opposed all talk of calling an ambulance. But, after waiting several hours, Baylis saw she was getting weaker and telephoned to St. Mary's Hospital, five miles away, for an ambulance.

Dr. Charles E. Stark responded, taking with him in the ambulance a heavy pulmotor to help revive the patient. The old woman was found to be [illegible] could not be aroused through the rough meadows, and it was decided to put her in a rowboat, in which the ambulance surgeon and the chauffeur rowed her to within a short distance of the stalled automobile ambulance.

Throughout the laborious trip, however, the old woman clung, with unabating pertinacity, to her small brown jug.

At the hospital she said she was Mrs. Clementine Smith, 70 years old, and that she lived with her son, Herman, at Springfield, L. I. On Monday evening, she said, she went out for a walk to a friend's house, carrying the little brown jug with her. The jug did not contain grape-juice.

The old woman remembered wandering off the road and presently finding herself splashing about in mud ankle-deep. She called for help, but only the croaking of frogs answered her. Then the nasty, slimy water washed higher and higher over her. It became harder and harder for her to pull her feet out of the bog, yet she feared to stand long in one place lest the marsh engulf her utterly.

In the desperate floundering about in the chilling bog all through that night the little jug and its contents came in good stead, and it was for that reason that the old woman nursed the precious little burden so tightly when finally, toward daybreak, her rescuers found her.

The police tried last night to find the old woman's relatives, but at a late hour they had not succeeded. At the hospital it was said that she and her earthenware friend might be out in a day or two, and as well as ever, unless pneumonia sets in in one of them.

FIND STUDENT GIBSON DEAD.

His Body Floating in the East River —No Money in Pockets.

The body of Benjamin Chatham Gibson, a student of Teachers College of Columbia University who disappeared on May 24, was found floating in the East River yesterday, and was identified last night in the Harlem Morgue. The police know nothing which will help in any way in clearing up the mystery of Gibson's disappearance. Coroner's Physician Curtin of the Bronx, who examined the body, said that he found no marks of violence. Gibson, according to his friends, had about $10 in money and a little jewelry when he disappeared. Neither the money nor the jewelry was found on the body.

Gibson was 42 years old, and lived with his wife at the Bryn Mawr Apartments at 123d Street and Amsterdam Avenue. They had come from Owensboro, Ky., and Gibson was taking a course at Teachers College. He was a hard worker. The week before his disappearance he had been taking his final examinations for the year, and had been melancholy because he thought he had failed to pass in some important subjects.

He left his wife in their home on the morning of Saturday, May 24, saying he was going to the university to see about his studies for next year. He was last seen at 120th Street and Broadway by a student at about 10 o'clock on that morning. From that time his whereabouts had been a mystery.

BISHOP AIDS INJURED BOY.

Carries Indoors Child Struck by Miss Kneeland's Auto.

Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., June 3.—An automobile owned by Miss Adele Kneeland of New York, in which she was riding with Bishop Thomas F. Davies of the Episcopal Diocese of Western Massachusetts, her guest, ran over Roland Dupont, 6 years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Dupont, in Lee this morning. The boy's left leg was broken above the knee.

Bishop Davies carried the boy into the house of Mrs. Thomas Duffy, the child's grandmother, and there Miss Kneeland assisted in comforting the child until a surgeon arrived.

The boy was playing beside the road, and as the approach of the automobile tried to cross the highway in front of the car. Miss Kneeland had nurses sent to care for him, and promised every other aid to his recovery.

SAYS SUFFRAGETTES ATTEMPTED MURDER

Wilson Tells of Two Who Tried to Push a Magistrate Over a Cliff.

HE SENTENCED MILITANTS

Oxford Boathouse Burned with Eton College Shell—Row at Royal Academy.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, June 3.—A startling story about the late Sir Henry Curtis Bennett, the Bow Street police magistrate, is related by Harry Wilson, a solicitor practicing in Bow Street. Sir Henry told Mr. Wilson that he was walking along the cliffs at a seaside resort when he was suddenly seized by one of two women, who tried to push him over the edge. Fortunately he fell the other way; otherwise he would have been killed. When he regained his feet the women had gone.

After that occurrence, says Mr. Wilson, Sir Henry was very nervous, and on more than one occasion expressed fear and wonderment whether anything would happen to him at the hands of the suffragettes. In consequence of this adventure the magistrate was constantly guarded by detectives. In his official capacity Sir Henry had sentenced Mrs. Pankhurst and many other suffragettes.

Rough's boathouse at Oxford and its contents, including an eight-oar boat just completed for the use of Eton College at the Henley races, were completely destroyed by fire today. Two women were seen leaving the spot just before the fire broke out, and a notice fastened to an adjoining bridge read "Votes for Women! No Peace Till We Get the Vote!"

Several members of the Women's Social and Political Union created a scene at the Royal Academy this afternoon.

They obtained admission in the usual way, and assembled in one of the rooms which was crowded with visitors. There one of them mounted a chair and began an address on the suffrage question, while a banner was produced and small flags were waved. The address, however, was cut short by the arrival of the police, who escorted the women from the building.

PROTEST TO CUBA.

English, French, and German Envoys Demand Action on Claims.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

HAVANA, June 3.—Owing to reports that the new Cuban Administration was adverse to arbitrating the claims of England, France, and Germany against Cuba for damages done by insurgents during the uprising against Spain, the Ministers of these nations called on the Secretary of State this afternoon to learn the purpose of the Government's attitude and to insist on an early settlement.

The House tabled the Arbitration bill on Monday, owing to President Menocal's opposition. Menocal, it is said, is not opposed to the principle, but to the terms of the bill, which places all the responsibility on him.

FIRST EUGENIC WEDDING.

The Rev. Mr. Jackson, Who Made the New Rule, Officiates.

Special to The New York Times.

MONTCLAIR, N. J., June 3.—Miss Ethel Daniels Phillips, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Gorham Phillips of 171 Cooper Avenue, and Aubrey Luther Whittemore, son of Mr. and Mrs. Luther A. Whittemore of Rogers Park, Chicago, were married in the Christian Union Congregational Church to-night. The officiating clergyman was the pastor of the church, the Rev. Henry E. Jackson. Mr. Jackson recently announced that he would require the bridegroom in all marriage ceremonies that he performed to furnish a medical certificate, and the wedding was the first at which he has officiated under the new rule.

The maid of honor was Miss Margaret Cook Atwell of Sewickley, Penn.; Mrs. Royal Wilbur France of Port Washington, L. I., and Mrs. William H. Lee of Shamokin, Penn., were the matrons of honor. The bridesmaids were Miss Anna Paisley Shane of Cleveland, Ohio, and Miss Glenna Cunningham of Montclair. Miss Helen Blatchford of Toronto, Canada, a cousin of the bridegroom, was flower girl. The best man was Dr. Lawrence Whittemore of New York, brother of the bridegroom. The ushers were Charles Swayne Phillips and Stanley G. Phillips, brothers of the bride; William Hooper of Toronto, Canada, and Charles Hathaway of Chicago. Spencer Phillips and Haviland Mekeel of Montclair were ribbon boys. Miss Phillips was given in marriage by her father.

Following the ceremony there was a large reception at the Phillips home, which is opposite the church on Cooper Avenue. Nearly 400 attended the reception.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., June 3.—Four Midshipmen of the graduating class who are satisfactory in their studies will not be commissioned as Ensigns upon graduation because of physical defects, it was announced to-day, but will have a re-examination later if they desire it. They are Charles L. Austin of Pennsylvania, Charles L. Fouts of Ohio, Arvid Pendleton of New York, and Paul de V. Sleeper of New Jersey.

Two other members of the class may not graduate, their cases being in the hands of the Secretary of the Navy, but the names of these have not been given out.

WOODFORD AUTO KILLS MAN.

Ex-Ambassador's Widow Arrested After Fatal Accident.

BRIDGEPORT, June 3.—Charged with homicide, Mrs. S. L. Woodford, widow of the former United States Ambassador to Spain, was arrested to-day and placed under $2,500 bonds, because an automobile she was learning to drive ran down and killed William Stanhouser, a laborer, in Fairfield, near here.

The accident occurred at a dangerous curve. Mrs. Woodford lost control of the car and it struck Stanhouser, dragging him fifty feet, partly under the wheels. Mrs. Woodford's chauffeur also was arrested. They will have a hearing on June 9.

HAS A VACCINE FOR CANCER.

Dr. Schmidt Says He Has Proved Its Curative Value.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, June 3.—Far-reaching claims in connection with the treatment of cancer were put forward by Dr. Otto Schmidt at a session of the General Medical Society at Cologne.

He professed to have proved that cancer was an infectious disease, caused by a parasite which he had discovered, and for which he had prepared a curative protective vaccine. Dr. Schmidt closed his address with a demand that a commission be appointed to test his investigations and experiments.

STEAL $25,000 JEWEL BOX.

Thieves Take It Away on Presenting a Deposit Receipt.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, June 3.—Another daring jewel robbery has been added to the long list reported in the last few weeks.

A firm of London jewelers deposited at the King's Cross Railway station a heavy box of jewelry valued at $25,000.

By the employment of a messenger boy, who was a perfectly innocent agent, thieves got possession of the deposit receipt for the box. In the early hours of the morning a cab drove up to the station. The driver presented the receipt, and obtained the box, which has not since been traced.

FELL INTO BARREL OF TAR.

Scaffold Breaks and a Carpenter Tumbles Into Hot Mass—May Die.

Archibald Simpson, a carpenter, of 777 Elder Avenue, the Bronx, was working on a scaffold at the new High School Building in Lawrence, L. I., yesterday, when he stumbled and fell headlong. The scaffold was fifteen feet above a barrel filled with hot tar. Simpson turned in the air, striking the tar feet first, and sinking into the hot liquid up to his shoulders. The tar spattered over his head.

Other workmen ran to Simpson's assistance and, after pulling him from the tar, stretched him out upon the ground and poured over him two gallons of lubricating oil. An ambulance was summoned meantime from St. Joseph's Hospital at Far Rockaway. At the hospital it was two hours before Drs. Pepper, Hensel, Rausch, and Lakin, working with shear and forceps, could remove the tar. Simpson was so badly burned, according to the physicians, that recovery is doubtful.

WESTON JADED, BUT GAME.

Veteran Walker Makes Suffern—Resumes Chicago Hike To-day.

Special to The New York Times.

MOUNTAIN HOUSE, SUFFERN, N. Y., June 3.—Edward Payson Weston, the famous long-distance walker of America, who started from the plaza in front of the City College on Monday at noon to walk to Chicago over the Erie Railroad, a distance of 999 miles, arrived here this afternoon at 2 o'clock, having covered 40 miles. On account of the hot weather Mr. Weston decided it would not be advisable to go further to-day. He felt somewhat jaded, as he explained always had been the case on the second day after beginning his foot journeys, because of the reaction from the exertion.

Mr. Weston will start to-morrow morning at 8 o'clock for Goshen, a distance of 28 miles, and he expects to reach there by the middle of the afternoon. He is attempting to beat his former record walk to Chicago, which he made over the long route, 1,226 miles, in the Summer of 1909, in 38 days on his journey to the Pacific Coast.

750 THEATRES IN CHICAGO.

900,000 Persons See Moving Pictures There Every Day.

CHICAGO, June 3.—There are 750 theatres in Chicago and seventy-six others in construction, according to figures made public to-day by the Building Commissioner. Half of the amusement houses are used exclusively for moving pictures, and have seating capacities of 200 each or less, but the average capacity is 400, or a total of 300,000. There will be an added seating capacity of 300,000 when the new theatres are completed in the Fall.

It is estimated the daily attendance is 900,000.

ACCUSED OF $500,000 FRAUD

Cruchet, Indicted with Small in Mining Case, Arrested in Boston.

BOSTON, June 3.—A. Calvin Cruchet, Treasurer of the American Securities Corporation, was arrested to-day on an indictment charging him with using the mails to defraud in the sale of the stock of the Brooklyn-Arizona Mining Company. Frederick E. Small, jointly indicted with Cruchet, is under arrest at Prescott, Ariz.

It is alleged that the defendants disposed of $500,000 stock and used the proceeds for their personal benefit. Cruchet pleaded not guilty and was held in $15,000 bonds for trial.

TO STOP SELFISH TARIFF VOTES

Plan to Use Lobby Inquiry Record of Personal Holdings Against Senators.

AN ADMINISTRATION MOVE

No Senate Rule to Enforce Exclusion, but La Follette Precedent Will Be Urged.

SUBPOENA 50 WITNESSES

Supposed Members of Subar Lobby —Dinner-and-Theatre Lobby "Insidious," Says Kenyon.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 3.—A high official of the Administration is authority for the statement that what has been considered an incidental feature of the lobby investigation by the Senate subcommittee may be used as a weapon for silencing the votes of particular Senators against items in the Tariff bill which the President particularly desires to pass.

According to this plan, when the vote is about to be taken on a closely contested rate the stenographic notes of the investigating committee will be read, showing some Senator's personal interest in the item at issue. The point will then be raised that the Senator has no right to vote for his personal interests.

If this plan be carried out, it would mean probably a negative gain of several votes on some of the most closely contested items of the Tariff bill. Senator Fall of New Mexico has told of his extensive sheep interests and Senator Warrenn will tell a similar story. Under the plan as outlined by the official, an effort will be made to prevent both these Senators from voting against free raw wool.

Senator Lippitt of Rhode Island this afternoon described his large holdings in cotton mills, Senator Catron of New Mexico owns a small lead mine, Senator Stephenson of Wisconsin has enormous holdings of lumber, Senator Jackson of Maryland, besides his lumber interest, has 1,000 shares of Steel stock. Many Senators have farms affected by the agricultural schedule, and their votes might be decisive on meats, cattle, flour, wheat, and the like.

When the plan was first mentioned it was thought that the rules of the Senate would forbid a Senator to vote where his personal interests were involved. It was found, however, that the rule referred to was in the manual of the House, and at that time was of very doubtful application to cases of this kind. Speakers have prevented a Representative from voting where he has been directly interested, for instance, on a motion affecting his right to a seat, but other Speakers have denied any authority to curtail the constitutional right of a Representative to vote. Most Speakers have left the question to the conscience of the member.

If the plan be put to the test in the Senate, it is believed that it will be done by trying simply to make the accusation so unpleasant that the interested Senators will ask to be excused from voting. Unless excused the Senate rules will compel him to vote one way or the other. Senator La Follette, in the tariff struggle of 1909, asked to be excused from voting on the lead paragraph because he held a few shares in a lead mine. Mr. La Follette's example will undoubtedly be quoted as a precedent.

The first direct outcome of the secret information given by President Wilson to Senators Overman and Reed was the issuance to-night of subpoenas for more than fifty persons supposed to have been named by Mr. Wilson as composing the alleged sugar lobby. These subpoenas were placed in the hands of deputies of the Sergeant at Arms of the Senate, and the deputies were scurrying around Washington this evening in the effort to serve them.

Among those subpoenaed are Henry G. Osgood, identified with the beet sugar interests; Frank C. Lowry of New York, Secretary of the Wholesale Grocers' Committee which has been charged with working for free sugar in the interest of the Federal Sugar Refining Company and other refining concerns; Truman G. Palmer of Washington, sugar statistician, and others known to be connected with the Domestic Sugar Producers, the name under which all the interests opposed to free sugar have conducted a publicity campaign against the proposed changes in the sugar schedule.

Buford Lynch, who came into notice recently in connection with the effort of Frederick H. Allen of Westchester County, New York, to be appointed Ambassador to France, was subpoenaed also.

All these witnesses are summoned to appear before the committee after next Friday, when the committee expects to conclude its examination of Senators.

SCORES "SOCIAL LOBBYING."

Bears Out Wilson Charges, Says Kenyon—Inquiry Uncloaks No Offenders.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 3.—The search for members of the "numerous and insidious lobby" denounced with the distinguished guests. Pointing to the sworn testimony of Edward Hines, "a lumber king," at the Lorimer election investigation, that he entertained Senators at a local hotel at dinners at a time when the lumber schedule in the Payne-Aldrich bill was before the Senate, Senator Kenyon declared that it was his belief that Senators were being entertained in this "insidious" way at present.

He also denounced ex-Senators for capitalizing their privilege of the floor by using it to lobby. Referring to one ex-Senator representing many railroads in Washington and often seen on the floor of the Senate, he advocated the enactment of legislation to prohibit an ex-Senator from being a lobbyist.

Mr. Hughes and the "Lobby."

The testimony of Senator Hughes of New Jersey, a close friend of the President's, who has been referred to repeatedly as the President's spokesman in the Senate, had been awaited with interest. Mr. Hughes denied that he knew what the President meant by a lobby. In fact, he had not read the President's statment. He knew nothing of an improper lobby, and said that standards of legislative propriety were much higher in Washington than in legislative assemblies elsewhere.

"These people," said Senator Nelson of Minnesota, a Republican member of the committee, "presented you with arguments. Did they present anything else?"

"I must confess they did," replied Mr. Hughes, while the committee laughed.

One man left with me a cake of scented soap. Another was rash enough to leave a sample hat that fitted me, and another left a razor. But I'll not vouch for the razor, because when I tried to shave it would not cut."

Mr. Hughes was the first Senator to express the belief that more representatives of affected interests were in Washington now than came here when the Payne-Aldrich bill was under consideration. But he explained that he was then in the minority of the House and not a member of the Ways and Means Committee in control of the bill.

"I made one short speech," said Mr. Hughes, "and spent the rest of my time at the horse"—he checked himself, then added with a laugh "at baseball. But for the last six weeks while I have been working on the Tariff bill as a member of the Finance Committee, my position has been most unfortunate. I haven't had time to open my mail; I've even stopped reading telegrams, and I haven't been outside my office. But I am convinced there is a great number of persons here interested in legislation."

If the President gave Chairman Overman a list of lobbyists, or supposed lobbyists, Mr. Overman has made little use of it in examining Senators. To-day for the first time he asked if a particular man had approached a Senator. The question was put to Mr. Hughes and referred to H. B. Alexander of Trenton, in the President's State of New Jersey. Mr. Hughes replied that Mr. Alexander had been a newspaperman in Trenton and lately had been interested in opposing the investigation of the West Virginia coal strike. Mr. Hughes thought he was a candidate for some office.

Mr. Cummins Impatient.

"What I want to know," said Senator Cummins, "is: 'Where is this lobby to which the President referred?' We have Senators here, and they say they have seen these gentlemen and those gentlemen and that they were properly interested in the subjects they discussed. But where are these the President described? What persons who have seen you fit the description of the President's statement?"

"You can see," said Mr. Hughes, "what an awkward position that question puts me in."

Mr. Hughes's reply encouraged Mr. Cummins to hope he was at last on the trail of iniquitous lobbyists, and when Mr. Hughes remarked that he would recite an incident if the committee would not insist upon the name of his caller, Mr. Cummins said that Mr. Hughes's nameless caller evidently was just the man the committee was looking for.

"Well," said Mr. Hughes, "when I was asleep in my hotel a man by some mistake was shown up, and when I awoke he was sitting on my bed. He said that Representative A. Mitchell Palmer had made a mathematical error in the Tariff bill. I wanted him out of the room and assured him that correcting mathematical errors was the smallest thing I did. But I tell you, Senators, he oughtn't to have sat on my bed."

Mr. Hughes said the Finance Committee would greater progress with the Tariff bill if 85 per cent. of the offers were were excluded. Some of his most insistent visitors he added, had been labor men.

The most sweeping denial of the existence of a lobby came from Senator Penrose of Pennsylvania. On the floor of the Senate last week he said that he could tell a lobbyist as far as he could see one, but to-day he told the committee that lobbyists were things of the past. There had not been a lobby here, he said, in twenty years. The steel and coal interests of Pennsylvania, he said, had drifted away more than ten years ago from the custom of keeping representatives regularly in Washington. He knew of no regular representative of the wool manufacturers, he said, unless it was Winthrop L. Marvin of Boston, but his work was perfectly legitimate.

"It is well known that certain interests have agents here," said the Senator, "and I suppose they are paid salaries. They evidently get information for their organizations. Their work is perfectly legitimate. I have seen Mr. Burgess for the pottery interests here for years, and Mr. Brown for the cotton people. Their work is perfectly legitimate as far as I know."

Mr. Penrose thought that only 40 per cent. of the number of persons who wanted to be heard on the Payne-Aldrich bill were in Washington now in regard to the Underwood bill.

Some Interests of Senators.

Senator Penrose said he had some shares in the United States Sugar and Land Company at Garden City, Kan., but he did not paint a flattering picture of it. Senator Fall of New Mexico said he was a large owner or cattle, horses, sheep and coal. Senator Gronna of North Dakota said he had a farm of 2,000 acres, was interested in the tariff on farm products to that extent, and had opposed Canadian reciprocity. He was also interested in banks and supposed the income tax would reach him.

Senator Lippitt of Rhode Island testified readily as to his large cotton interests and the effect of the tariff on them. Mr. Reed, of Missouri, a Democratic member of the committee, tried to draw from him damaging admissions as to the part he had played in the passage of the Payne-Aldrich bill, but Mr. Lippitt answered that he had come to Washington first, before he was a Senator, as a member of a delegation of cotton men, and later, at Senator Aldrich's request, to serve as an expert in interpreting certain features of the Payne-Aldrich measure. Mr. Lippitt denied that he had given advice in framing the bill and said he simply had been consulted as an expert.

Common stock of the Manville Cotton Company, of which he was manager, had gone down probably 50 per cent. as a result of the present threatened tariff reduction, Senator Lippitt said.

Senator La Follette testified that he was interested in the publication of a weekly paper, owning most of the stock, but said he did not believe it would be affected by any item in the tariff bill. He said he owned a farm and an interest in some zinc bearing lands in Wisconsin, which since the Payne-Aldrich law, had been producing a small royalty. In response to letters from zinc land owners in his State, the Senator said, he asked Senator Stone recently if it would be advisable for them to come to Washington to present their views against a reduction in zinc tariff rates. As a result he wrote them not to come, as it probably would do no good.

Four years ago, Senator La Follette said, he was interviewed in regard to hides, the interviewer informing him that he already had engaged a page or two of advertisement in his magazine.

"I told him if he didn't hurry to the telegraph office I would beat him in ordering a cancellation of his advertisement," declared the Senator.

Replying to questions about persons being maintained in Washington to look after legislation, Senator La Follette said the American Federation of Labor and the Seamen's Union kept men here.

"Under my definition of the term, that is lobbying," he declared. Indian interests, he said, kept others here, his understanding being that there was an organization of lawyers in Washington that worked up claims. He said he had felt the influence of that organization in Wisconsin Indian matters.

Lobbying "Common" Once.

"Yes, we have lobbying now of a 'coarser kind' than at present," the Senator said the [illegible] three months.

and-sale method is out of date. Later the interests elected men to look out for them from the inside. In the last six or seven years the representatives of the special interests have fast disappeared.

"A legislator should stand in the same attitude as a Judge. I would make it an offense to speak privately to a Member or Senator about public business."

Several Senators let it be known that they had received by registered mail what purported to be a reproduction of a letter from the American Cane Growers' Association of the United States sent to members asking for contributions to a fund for the use of "a large committee in Washington." The letter did not appear in the lobby investigation to-day, but probably it will be read before the hearing is concluded.

RAW FOOD MATERIALS FREE.

Sub-Committee Votes Against Duty on Cattle, Wheat, and Oats.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 3.—President Wilson is showing a lively interest in a tangle over differentials in duties on certain agricultural products. The President's attitude is that there must be no tax on the breakfast table, and to that extent he favors the provision of the House bill leaving meat, flour, and oatmeal on the free list. The trouble comes from the fact that the House bill puts a duty on the raw materials from which these products are made—cattle, wheat, and oats.

Senator John Sharp Williams's subcommittee, which has charge of the agricultural schedule, is determined that the finished product shall not have a lower duty than the raw material. The report went out last night that the subcommittee had decided to equalize the differences by imposing levies on the finished products. That report alarmed the President, and this morning he made his position clear to Chairman Simmons of the Finance Committee. As a result the sub-committee voted late to-day to place livestock, wheat, and oats on the free list.

"The matter is settled now," said Senator Simmons, "and that is the way the schedule will go to the Senate."

The inquisitorial clause of the Underwood bill, which aroused foreign protest, has been giving the Williams subcommittee considerable trouble, and, in trying to work out a modification of its provisions, they have had the aid of Secretary McAdoo, Secretary Bryan, and John Bassett Moore, Counsellor of the State Department. It is now proposed to give the Secretary of the Treasury the right to proclaim values and, if foreign manufacturers protest against a valuation, require them to submit their books, showing cost of production and foreign value of the goods in dispute. This would remove the objection to the inquisitorial clause.

The proposal to place for the first time in the country's history a tariff on raw or undressed furs has aroused loud protests from furriers, and the sub-committee, headed by Senator Johnson, which has the sundries schedule under consideration, is studying the situation. The Underwood bill proposes a rate of 10 per cent. on raw furs. One brief filed with the committee by Joseph Ullman of New York stated that a duty, no matter how small, on raw furs, would completely destroy an international trade which United States fur merchants have built up. Fur skins are free in all foreign countries, except Russia, which has a very small specific duty by weight.

The brief set forth that under the most favorable circumstances the estimated amount of revenue from such a duty, which the Ways and Means Committee put at at $400,000, would fall decidedly below one-half of this amount and insisted that the tariff would result in a loss to American merchants of $6,000,000 annually.

It was reported to-night that the subcommittee considering the income tax has unanimously decided to amend the bill so as to give genuine mutual life insurance companies exemption.

Automobiles costing not more than $2,000 it was learned to-night, will be taxed 30 per cent. ad valorem, instead of 45 per cent., as in the Underwood bill. This will be in the report of Senator Stone's sub-committee. All automobiles costing more than $2,000 the sub-committee graded as luxuries, and on them the 45 per cent. rate will be retained. Cars worth $2,000 or less the sub-committee classed as necessities.

COHALAN CHARGES TO-DAY.

Understood Bar Association Will Consider Them at Meeting.

In spite of the secrecy which envelops the proceedings of the Committee on Grievances of the Bar Association, it is understood that at its meeting this afternoon the charges which have been publicly made by John A. Connolly against Justice Cohalan, and the reply which he has made to them, will be considered.

Several leading members of the Bar Association had hoped that Gov. Sulzer would see his way clear to give them a lead. But so far the Governor has refused to act, and his friends at Albany represent him as watching the case closely, but not yet convinced that he is called upon to intervene.

Those who have been considering the Connolly charges from the political point of view have wondered that the Justice seems to have had no assistance from Charles F. Murphy and Tammany Hall. As in his explanation the Justice made the statement that he, a man of admittedly moderate means, had felt himself impelled during the political campaign of 1909 to return to Connolly nearly $4,000, which he had legitimately earned, to prevent a personal attack confusing the issues of the election, it has been thought significant that the leader of his party has not come forward to back up this tale of sacrifice.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, N. Y., June 3.—Gov. Sulzer signified again to-day his entire willingness to take up the charges against Justice Cohalan when they should properly come before him. Until such time he does not care to discuss the matter. He still believes that the preliminary action should be taken by the State Bar Association or the District Attorney of New York.

Frederick E. Wadhams, Secretary of the State Bar Association, is absent in Montreal arranging for the meeting of the National Bar Association. At his office it was said that the State Bar Association acted independently of the New York Bar Association, and that it was not likely that the city association would make any recommendations to the State association. Therefore the only way in which the charges would come before the State association would be through its Grievance Committee, to which complaint must be made. This committee consists of twenty-seven members. John H. Burke of Ballston Spa is its Chairman.

"BIG TIM" MUCH IMPROVED.

Sheriff Harburger Says His Old Friend Is on Way to Recovery.

"Big Tim" Sullivan is rapidly regaining his full health on his brother's farm in Westchester County, and within two or three months should be able to resume the complete conduct of all his affairs, according to Sheriff Harburger. Sheriff Harburger discussed yesterday a visit he had made to Mr. Sullivan on Monday.

On Monday Mr. Sullivan expressed an earnest desire to see his old friend and sent a motor car down to the Sheriff's office, 299 Broadway, to bring Sheriff Harburger to see him. The Sheriff responded at once. He said he talked with Mr. Sullivan for two hours. They discussed matters going back as far as 1886, the Sheriff said. He found Mr. Sullivan in surprisingly good health and keenly interested in all sorts of subjects. He said that Mr. Sullivan is now a regular reader of the newspapers and discussed all the leading topics of the day.

Mr. Sullivan was elected to Congress from his old Bowery district last Fall, but his ill health and the appointment of a committee of his person and property prevented him taking his seat. Sheriff Harburger said that he would [illegible] Congress duties without fail [illegible] three months.

DEPARTMENTS HIT BY SULZER VETOES

Officials Who Oppose Governor's Primary Bill Feel Sting of Lost Appropriations.

EMERSON ROAD BILL SIGNED

Reported That Adirondack Senator Will Change His Vote—Direct Tax Is Vetoed.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, June 3.—Gov. Sulzer to-day announced the concluding action taken by him on thirty-day bills. He vetoed items in the Appropriation bills amounting to $3,149,511. These vetoes affected the State Conservation Commission, and the departments presided over by Attorney General Carmody, Secretary of State May, Fire Marshal Ahearn, and Controller Sohmer, all of whom oppose the Governor's Direct Primary bill. As a result of the vetoes numerous offices under the Conservation Commission are practically wiped out, the Governor abolishing the salaries.

As a sort of off-set to this severity, the Governor signed the Emerson-Prime appropriation for expedited highways in the Adirondacks. Senator Emerson, the sponsor of the measure, voted against the Governor's Direct Primary bill, but is said to have experienced a change of heart.

The Governor vetoed the bill for a direct State tax to meet the sinking fund requirements. He signed the bill for the organization of a colored battalion of the National Guard in New York City. He vetoed four Tammany bills affecting the Department of Education of New York City. He halted the work of eliminating grade crossings by striking out appropriations for that purpose totaling $600,000. He vetoed the Automobile License bill.

Gov. Sulzer gave out a statement showing the total appropriations for the general expenses of the State Government to be $48,168,890. Last year the total was $45,558,598, the increase this year being $2,610,292.

Conservation Commission Hit.

By the vetoing of the items in the annual Appropriation and Supply bills to the amount of $3,149,511, the department most serious affected is the State Conservation Commission, created by an act passed in 1911 by the Democrats, and regarded by Gov. Dix as the most important constructive measure of his Administration.

The Conservation Commission loses its three deputies—Charles H. Jackson, Thomas H. Guy, and Joseph J. Fox. They had been paid $3,500 a year; the Legislature raised the salary to $5,000. The Governor vetoed the entire allowance for salaries, thus practically wiping out the office of the deputies.

Another official of the Conservation Department to feel the effect of the veto is ex-Senator Edwin Bailey, Jr., of Patchogue, whose salary as supervisor of marine fisheries also was raised to $5,000. The Governor vetoed the item, and if Mr. Bailey continues in the service he must do so without pay. Mr. Bailey is in sympathy with Tammany. Deputy Supervisor Fogarty of Brooklyn also is left without salary, the item of $3,000 for his benefit being vetoed.

The Conservation Department asked for total appropriations of $600,000. This was cut down, on the recommendation of the Governor's Commission of Inquiry, to about $250,000. The Legislature restored $200,000 of the amount cut out, and the Governor cut off the amount added.

The bill for a direct State tax of eight-tenths of a mill, which the Governor vetoed, was intended to raise about $800,000 to meet the sinking fund installment, and a portion of the necessary general fund for the year beginning Oct. 1. The Governor also vetoed the separate bills providing for installments for the various sinking funds. By vetoing this item the Governor leaves no provision in law for this year's share of the sinking funds which secure the State bonds. As a reason he declares that there is an excess now in the sinking funds of more than $17,000,000, and that it is unnecessary to increase these funds at the present time. He urged the Legislature to permit the withdrawal of about $17,000,000 from the sinking funds to pay sinking fund installments and general expenses. The bill embodying this scheme was passed by the Senate, but was killed in the Assembly. The Governor's action today will make it necessary for the Legislature to again consider the sinking fund problem at the extra session to meet this month.

Money for Mountain Roads.

The Emerson-Prime bill, which the Governor signed, gives more money for expedited State highway routes in Warren and Essex Counties. This measure was opposed by counties which had not had a State route allowance, although Warren and Essex had had their full quota. When Senator Emerson came to Albany three weeks ago he had an interview with the Governor, and at its close he said the Governor had told him that he need not expect favors from the Executive Chamber unless he was prepared to vote for the Governor's Direct Primary bill. A week later the Senator saw the Governor again in relation to the road bill, and the Executive said he would be guided by the judgment of Highway Commissioner Carlisle. The plan was approved by Mr. Carlisle, and the Governor signed the bill. So far as known here, Senator Emerson has not announced what his course will be when the Governor's primary bill comes before the Legislature again, but it is stated on authority from the Warren County Republican headquarters that he will change from the negative to the affirmative.

One of the bills signed on the last day allowed by law was Senator Boylan's, providing that in cases where shares of stock are issued without designated money value the stock transfer tax shall be two cents for each share transferred. The bill also requires the filing with the Controller of certificates of all shares transferred, with the names and addresses of the persons engaging in the trade. Officials of the Controller's office estimate that the new law will increase the stock transfer tax at least $1,000,000 a year.

The signing of the bill which directs the organization of a colored battalion of the National Guard in New York City was not influenced by the officials of the guard. In fact, they were opposed to the plan. The Governor listened to the negroes who urged the enactment of the bill, and said he believed that justice to the negro demanded the action. He said that for twenty years the negroes had tried to obtain this legislation. The Governor was convinced of the availability of colored troops by their conduct in the Spanish war.

Tammany School Bills Vetoed.

Four bills introduced by Assemblyman McKee providing for New York charter amendments affecting the Department of Education, were vetoed, presumably on the ground that the General Home Rule bill passed at the recent session gives the city the power to deal with this situation. The bills were urged by Tammany, and were intended to curtail the power of the Superintendent and to give the Board of Education and its President more power over the department.

The Governor vetoed an item of $2,000 for personal expenses and counsel fees for Henry Selant of New York, Progressive, who was unseated as Senator by the Senate in favor of George W. Simpson, a Democrat. The Governor says Selant "has already received a large amount of salary for an office to which he was not [illegible]

WON'T DISTURB GOETHALS.

Metcalfe Appointment a Surprise—Curious Political Story.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 3.—No other piece of recent political news has attracted so much interest in Washington as the statement contained in a Washington dispatch printed in THE NEW YORK TIMES to-day that Richard L. Metcalfe of Lincoln, Neb., editor of Bryan's Commoner, would be appointed Governor of the Panama Canal Zone with a salary of $14,000 a year. The statement was confirmed officially at the White House. Mr. Metcalfe is to succeed Maurice H. Thatcher of Kentucky as the sole civilian member of the Canal Commission, who by virtue of his duties as civil administrator of the zone receives the complimentary title of Governor.

Much of the interest in THE TIMES story arose from the understanding that it was through the influence of Secretary Bryan that President Wilson decided to appoint Mr. Metcalfe to this lucrative and important position, which is regarded as one of the choicest bits of patronage at the disposal of the President, but the interest was greater in the effect Mr. Metcalfe's appointment would have on the fortunes of Col. George W. Goethal's, chief engineer of the canal.

It was explained officially to-day that President Wilson had determined not to take advantage of the law authorizing him to reorganize the Canal Zone administration until after the canal had been completed, so that the engineer officers of the present Canal Commission might have opportunity to enjoy the fruition of their service. Nothing came to light to-day to indicate what the Administration's plans were for Col. Goethals after he had concluded his great engineering feat.

Denials were made authoritatively today that there was any politics in the selection of Mr. Metcalfe. His selection was a surprise, as it was not known that Mr. Thatcher was to be displaced. For several weeks there had been rumors that Mr. Metcalfe would be made Governor-General of the Philippines, a place which has a salary of $20,000 and is the greatest office the President has in his power to bestow, so far as compensation, powers, and honors are concerned.

The story came out to-night that Mr. Metcalfe was offered, but declined, the nomination for Vice-President on the Progressive Party's National ticket last Summer, as running mate for Theodore Roosevelt. When the Progressives were meeting at Chicago last June a committee, consisting of two New Yorkers and a Pennsylvanian, was delegated to go from that city to Lincoln to offer the nomination to Mr. Metcalfe. But when the proposition was broached to Mr. Metcalfe he declined to heed it. He had already declared strongly for Woodrow Wilson.

Court of Appeals to Pass on Legality of Oral Wagers.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, June 3.—The question of the legality of oral betting at racetracks was submitted to the Court of Appeals to-day without argument. The case was that of Paul Shane in a habeas corpus proceeding against Charles F. Gittens, Justice of the Peace of Hempstead.

Shane was arrested on information laid before the Justice charging him with bookmaking in Belmont Park on June 6 last. He was heard by a Deputy Sheriff to make bets on the races, and the person with whom the wager was placed was seen to make a memorandum.

The Court of Appeals in the Lichtenstein case held:

"One who bets privately and is not soliciting bets in prearranged scheme of odds is not a bookmaker."

A later decision held that it did not constitute bookmaking for the opposing bettor to record the wager. The amendment of 1910 was made to meet those decisions. It provides:

"Any person who engages in bookmaking, with or without writing, at any time or place, is guilty of a misdemeanor."

Those supporting the law assert that the definition of a bookmaker is "one who engages in bookmaking as a business," and that the memorandum is only an aid and does not alter the offense.

DENY HUMPHREY'S CHARGE.

Northern Pacific Makes Answer and Forest Service Is Defended.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. PAUL, Minn., June 3.—President Howard Elliott of the Northern Pacific Railway issued this statement to-day in regard to the allegation made by Congressman Humphrey that the Government Forestry Service had permitted the Northern Pacific to exchange 450,000 acres of barren land for Government timber land worth $10,000,000:

"Until we receive a copy of Congressman Humphrey's speech in Congress and know exactly what he said we cannot make a specific reply. We can say, however, that all exchanges of land with the United States were made under authority of acts of Congress.

"The act apparently referred to by Mr. Humphrey was that of 1899, authorizing an exchange for Northern Pacific lands within the territory Congress desired to set aside as Mount Rainier National Park, to create this park it was necessary to purchase privately owned lands therein, and this the act provided for in the form of an exchange.

"It may be that Mr. Humphrey in speaking of barren land had in mind the glacier areas in this park, and that he overlooked entirely that the Interior Department decided that the glacier area was not a part of the Northern Pacific land grant, and the Northern Pacific Road received absolutely not a single acre in exchange for the glacier area.

"In passing the various acts Congress was prompted by the belief that they were in the public interest and no influence whatever was brought to bear on Congress by the Northern Pacific Railway Company to secure their passage, nor has the company profited in any way by the various exchanges made."

WASHINGTON, June 3.—Representative Murdock, leader of the Progressive Party, replied to-day in the House to the speech made yesterday by Representative Humphrey of Washington attacking the Forest Service. Mr. Murdock defended the service, and declared it had done great work in preserving the forests of the country, particularly in Alaska. Mr. Murdock was followed by Representative Bryan of Washington, who also lauded the work of the service.

MAY SPLIT ON WHITMAN.

Fusion Movement Not Harmonious in Its Attitude Toward Candidate.

The work of picking a Fusion candidate for Mayor will get under way today when the Executive Committee of the Citizens Committee of 107 will meet at the Fifth Avenue Building to select its Committee on Nominations. This committee will find the men to lead the anti-Tammany fight in the municipal campaign in Fall.

The committee is composed of men of various party creeds. There are Republicans who are strong in their advocacy of Charles S. Whitman. There are independent Democrats who favor a man of that type. There are former Independence Leaguers who are favoring a man of radical type. And there are also Progressives who, conscious of the fact that their party ran second in this city in the last Gubernatorial contest, believe that they are entitled to the biggest say in the Fusion conferences against Tammany. The Progressives favor the nomination of an independent Democrat.

There are fears in many quarters that the strength of Mr. Whitman may be the weakness of the Fusion movement, if not actually the rock on which it will shatter. Many of the Republican leaders in this city who have not taken active part in the Fusion conferences have more than intimated that they would be very pleased to have the Fusion movement break up so that they might be in a position to go it alone with Mr. Whitman.

HATFIELD CLEARED OF MINE TYRANNY

Debs, Berger, and Germer, Socialist Committee, Lay Evils to Glasscock.

TELL OF ATTACKS IN DARK

West Virginia's Present Governor, Investigators Say, Recognizes Labor's Right to Organize.

CHICAGO, June 3.—Gov. Hatfield of West Virginia is exonerated on several charges circulated against him in connection with the West Virginia coal mine strike in a report to the National Committee of the Socialist Party, made to-day by Victor L. Berger, Adolph Germer, and Eugene V. Debs. The burden of resentment in the report is directed against Gov. Hatfield's predecessor, ex-Gov. Glasscock. It was Mr. Glasscock, says the report, who was responsible for martial law and many atrocities.

Mr. Hatfield is censured for suppressing two Socialist papers and imprisoning their editors, but the report quotes him as admitting that action was unjust and announcing that the papers might continue to issue.

The committeemen say they were shadowed from the moment they arrived in Charleston. It was decided to visit Gov. Hatfield, but he would see only Mr. Debs. The interview was so highly satisfactory that on the following day the entire committee was received. The report says:

Gov. Hatfield had inherited martial law from Gov. Glasscock, and the reason he permitted it to remain effective was because he was requested to do so by the union miners themselves to prevent them and their organizers from being assaulted and beaten up by the Baldwin-Felts thugs in the employ of the mine owners. This statement of the Governor was subsequently verified by all the officials and organizers of the United Mine Workers.

The committee learned the Governor had two mine guards in jail and that he had refused to liberate them on bail offered by the operators. The day previous to the interview he had released unconditionally all "comrades" then remaining in prison. Mr. Hatfield referred to the fact that not in a single instance had he affirmed the conviction of the Military Commission. The committee continues:

The Governor unhesitatingly asserted that workingmen had the right to organize, and that he would protect them in that right to the extent of his power; that the Socialists had the same right that Republicans and Democrats had; that they were entitled to the right of free speech and free assemblage and to the full protection of the law.

The committee found Gov. Hatfield not opposed to the Senate investigation. It adds:

We have no desire to exculpate Gov. Hatfield for any act he is justly responsible for, but it is undoubtedly true that he has been accused of wrongs which were committed under the Administration of Gov. Glasscock, his predecessor, to whose official spinelessness and subservience to the mine owners are mainly due the outrages which so long disgraced West Virginia in the eyes of the Nation.

It was under the Administration of Glasscock, and not Hatfield, that martial law was ordered; that the Military Commission was created; that "Mother" Jones and many others were court-martialed and convicted, and it also was under the Glasscock Administration that an armored train, in the name of law and order, shot up the cabins and tents of the miners, dealing out death and destruction under cover of darkness.

Gov. Hatfield is quoted as disavowing a threat that he would banish all miners who refused to accept the settlement. The report also says:

The reports of outrages perpetrated on the defenseless miners and their families in the Glasscock administration have not in the least been exaggerated. Houses and tents were shot up indiscriminately from an armored train in the darkness, men were assaulted and women insulted by the dastardly mine thugs, and even little children were not spared.

The committee asserts that in parts of West Virginia, owing to allen ownership, the feudalism of the Middle Ages still prevails over wide areas owned privately.

AUTOISTS GIVE FALSE NAMES

More Than 100 New York City Licenses Cannot Be Traced.

Col. Edward S. Cornell, head of the National Highway Protective Society, has sent to the Secretary of State a list of over one hundred names in this city to which automobile licenses have been issued, and which the society has discovered to be false.

"This has undoubtedly been done to prevent identification in case of accident, or the car is being used for some other crooked purposes," says Col. Cornell. "The investigation we have started will be continued until we have eliminated all of these fake licenses."

Secretary May said that he intended to prosecute all people he could find who had taken out licenses under fraudulent names and addresses, and also the licenses procured in this manner would be revoked. The offense is a misdemeanor and punishable only by a heavy fine and revocation of the license.

DISCLAIMER AS TO MULFORD

Denial That He Had Been Treated with the Friedmann Serum.

The Friedmann Institute denied yesterday that Richard A. Mulford of Middletown, who died from tuberculosis on last Saturday, had been treated with the Friedmann serum, as was said in a special dispatch to THE NEW YORK TIMES, published in Sunday's issue.

The letter of the Friedmann Institute to THE TIMES says:

"It was stated in THE TIMES of June 1 that Richard Mulford, who died in Middletown on May 29, was one of Dr. Friedmann's patients. At no time had Mr. Mulford been treated by Dr. Friedmann."

DISLIKES STEFANSSON SHIP.

Capt. Bartlett Says It's Unfit for Arctic Exploration.

Special to The New York Times.

VICTORIA, B. C., June 3.—Although Capt. Robert Bartlett, it is thought, eventually will leave Victoria in the schooner Karluk as sailing master of the vessel bought to convey the Stefansson expedition to the arctic, he is not likely to do so on Tuesday next as expected, and will go only to make the best of the position in which he finds himself. That the vessel cannot be made ready to leave Esquimalt on Tuesday is the opinion of H. Johansen, the Danish naturalist, who is the most recent arrival of the Stefansson party.

Capt. Bartlett's trouble is not the date of sailing, but the ship. His is not impressed with the Karluk as a vessel for exploration. Friends of his say he looked on the schooner with very bad grace on his arrival, and that his opinion has not improved on closer acquaintance. To Dr. Forbes-Mackay, physician of the party, and to others, Capt. Bartlett has said the Karluk is not fit for the trip, and more suited to exhibition in a museum.

A second schooner, the Alaska, was bought in Seattle yesterday for the expedition.

WYNYARD, Sask., June 3.—Vilhjalmar Stefansson, the explorer, who has planned to start from Esquimalt next Tuesday on a five-year expedition to the arctic regions, arrived here to-day on a farewell visit to his mother and brother.

Stefansson had intended to proceed today to Victoria, where his party had gathered, but he found preparations for a public reception and banquet in his honor had been made for to-night. He will delay his trip to the coast until late to-morrow.

BULGAR CABINET OUT.

Report Received in London Augurs Well for Balkan Peace.

LONDON, June 3.—News of the resignation of the Bulgarian Cabinet was received in London late to-night. If true, it is likely to serve the ends of peace.

Dr. Daneff, the Bulgarian peace delegate, on his arrival at Sofia is expected to reconstitute the Cabinet. Probably his hasty summons home yesterday was for that purpose, for the fall of the Guechoff Cabinet was not unexpected.

It is thought that the new Ministry will consist of a coalition representing all parties.

The establishment of a neutral zone between the Greeks and the Bulgars at Salonika removes the tinder which was likely any moment to cause a conflagration. The neutral line is purely provisional and is not intended to influence the future delimitation of the frontiers.

The Premiers of the four Balkan States expect to meet first at some Balkan town, and if they fail to reach an agreement will adjourn their deliberations to St. Petersburg.

Greece and Turkey are still deadlocked regarding the renewal of ante-bellum treaties, on which Greece insists as a condition of taking up the peace settlement.

An Exchange Telegraph Company's dispatch from Constantinople says the Bulgarian troops began to-day the evacuation of the Turkish seaport of Rodosto, on the Sea of Marmora.

SUES RUSSIA FOR MILLIONS

And Russian Creditors Sue Lake Torpedo Company in Turn.

ST. PETERSBURG, June 3.—The Lake Torpedo Boat Company of Bridgeport, Conn., has filed a claim against the Russian Admiralty for $578,000 and $2,000,000 damages for alleged breach of contract connected with the construction of four submarines for the Russian Government.

As soon as this claim had been entered, Russian creditors of the Lake Torpedo Boat Company intervened in the commercial court here in order to secure the payment of the sums claimed to themselves. The commercial court delared that it had jurisdiction in their behalf, and called upon the Admiralty to produce documents.

In the further stages in the legal procedure have not yet been decided upon.

The American attorney for the Lake Torpedo Boat Company declines to be interviewed on the subject because an imperial ukase defining military secrets prevents him from discussing the question of the construction of Russian submarines.

Perreyon Holds the Aeroplane Record for Pilot with a Passenger.

BUC, France, June 3.—The world's altitude record for an aeroplane carrying a pilot and a passenger was broken to-day by Edmond Perreyon, the French aviator, who rose to a height of 16,368 feet, or 3 1-10 miles.

Perreyon also holds the world's altitude record for an aeroplane carrying only a pilot, having risen to a height of 19,650 feet at Buc on March 13 this year.

O'Connell Says Good-by to Rome.

ROME, June 3.—Cardinal William H. O'Connell, Archbishop of Boston, paid a farewell visit to all the Cardinals in Rome to-day. The Papal Secretary of State, Cardinal Merry Del Val, greeted him affectionately and wished him a pleasant journey, expressing the hope that he would see the Cardinal in Rome in 1914. Cardinal O'Connell will leave here Thursday. He will proceed north by automobile for a brief visit and will then go to Germany and later to Holland.

mentioned in the indictment and publicly admitted its authorship.

Arguments of the Lawyers.

Mr. Carless summed up for the defense. He argued that criticism of the police did not constitute hostility to government, and that in addition the police were not the government. He concluded with the remark that the conviction of Scott would mean that free speech was a "dead letter" in New Jersey.

County Prosecutor Dunn made the argument for the State. He said that the article in question did constitute the offense of hostility to government, in that it was directed against the police, the arm of the government charged with the enforcement of law. He cited the history of the law under which the indictment was brought, and said that instead of coming under the head of free speech, as guaranteed by the Constitution, the article in question constituted a most flagrant violation of that privilege.

Judge Klenert's charge was brief. He explained the law, and left it for the jury to decide whether the editorial came within the provisions of the statute.

As soon as the members of the jury had been locked in their room Assistant Prosecutor Force called for trial the case of the forty-four strikers charged with unlawful assemblage.

There were so many defendants that it was impossible to find room for them near Adolph Hunziger of counsel for the Industrial Workers of the World, and so they were permitted to sit as it suited them, anywhere in the courtroom. The alleged "unlawful assemblage" occurred April 25 last, in the vicinity of the Harding silk mill. The State says that the strikers refused to disperse, and marched up and down the streets, and at times jeered the police. It is charged that when eleven loyal workers of the Harding company quit work for the afternoon and started from the mill under police protection, a big crowd of strikers followed and refused to disperse when ordered by the police to do so.

The only witnesses called this afternoon were policemen. The names of the forty-four prisoners were called while each policeman was on the stand, and he was asked to identify them as the persons who were the ringleaders on the occasion named. None of the police could identify all of the prisoners, but all of them could identify some.

The calling of the roll produced an unusual court scene. As the clerk of the court would call the names of the defendants they would pop up in all parts of the room. It was a roll in which the names of persons of at least five nationalities figured. The one person not a man among the accused was Anna Silverman, 17 years old, this best known of the I. W. W. pickets. She is the girl who has been selected to lead the army of the I. W. W. into New York on next Saturday. Nearly every one of the policemen remembered seeing Miss Silverman in the crowd of strikers on April 25.

The State will call its civilian witnesses to-morrow, and will then rest its case. The defense expects to begin offering its testimony, which will be a flat denial of the [illegible] charged, some time to-morrow [illegible]

DREAM CALLS TWO AND ONE MAN DIES

Brothers Have Identical Vision and Apparent Visitation from Dead Father.

WIVES COMPARE EXPERIENCE

Neither Knows of the Other's Experience Until Max Freedman Is on His Death Bed.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., June 3.—One night, about two weeks ago, while Joseph H. Freedman, a produce wholesaler, of 181 Burnet Street, this city, was asleep it seemed to him that his father, who died a year ago, entered the room and laid both hands upon his shoulders, saying:

"Come with me, Joe. Come, and we'll lie down together up there under the grass, where we can sleep and sleep and not know or care what is going on here. Come, be happy in the dank earth and moldering boards, with my lying by your side."

Freedman fought off his father's advances. In his dream he wept and pleaded with the apparition. But the father insisted that his son must accompany him. Freedman remembers vividly his terrified struggles, and how, finally, when he had exhausted every other argument, he pleaded with his father that his wife and children needed him and he could not leave them alone and unprotected in the world. Then, sadly it seemed to him, his father relented. But as the apparition faded away toward the door it seemed to the son that his father's voice cried back to him:

"But I will not stay alone. I will have some one with me. I must not longer stay alone."

In the morning, when Freedman awoke, he remembered his dream with a shudder, and told his wife

MAGYAR CABINET TO RESIGN.

Deputy Who Accused Premier of Corruption Upheld by the Courts.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

VIENNA, June 3.—The Hungarian Cabinet decided to-night to resign to-morrow. This decision was taken after a verdict was given to-day against Premier Dr. Lukacs in the libel action brought by him against Desy, the Opposition Deputy, who accused the Minister of having misappropriated public moneys for election purposes, thus securing the return of his party by bribing the voters.

The Judges held that the defendant had proved that the Premier, on the conclusion of contracts with the Bank of Hungary, had accepted a sum exceeding $625,000, and that "whereas, from legal and moral points of view, it is not permissible for a Minister to accept any sum of money whatever from any concern doing business with the State, even though, as in the present case, the Minister does not personally derive the slightest financial benefit, but merely promotes the purposes of a political party, the court is bound to regard the offensive expression used by Desy with reference to the Premier as privileged."

The offensive expression used by Desy was that Lukacs was "the greatest Panamist in Europe," the reference being to the notorious Panama Canal bribery scandals in France.

TREASON WAS WIDESPREAD.

Austrian Papers Say That General Staff Officers Are Suspected.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

VIENNA, June 3.—Despite official efforts to minimize the gravity of the espionage scandal, it appears that a widespread system of treachery has been in operation.

The Zeit says that searches have been made of the houses of several high officers of the General Staff. The Tagespost asserts that the conduct of no fewer than twenty officers is subject to judicial investigation. It also says that the police have secretly arrested twenty spies, alleged to be Russians, in several Austrian towns.

DECLINE IN BERLIN MARKET.

Stocks Sag in Sympathy with Canadian Pacific Slump Here.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

BERLIN, June 3.—The heavy slump in Canadian Pacific in New York reacted strongly upon the Berlin market to-day, causing a decline of from 3 to 5 points, although there was a partial recovery before the close. All standard German stocks declined in sympathy, with the Deutsche Bank and the Hamburg-American Line, the leading industrial shares, dropping from 3 to 6 points. German Government securities, especially Imperial 4s, were also weak.

Gold conditions have considerably improved, owing to the constant importations, on behalf of the Imperial Bank, from England. Germany is said to have taken practically all the gold bars that have reached London from South Africa in the last ten days, and importing operations are still in progress.

KROPOTKIN ASKS NO FAVORS

Revolutionist Will Not Petition to Remain in Switzerland.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

GENEVA, June 3.—Prince Kropotkin, the famous Russian writer and revolutionist, who was expelled from Switzerland in 1881 for the "glorification" of the murder of Czar Alexander II., has been permitted by the Federal Government, owing to his failing health, to spend a few months at Locarno.

Several Swiss friends have forwarded a petition to Berne asking that the expulsion order be rescinded. The reply was that the Prince must make application in person. This he refused to do, and, as his time is up, he will return to London within the next few days.

ARMS SEIZED AT BELFAST.

Sending of Rifles to "Loyal Ulster" Thought to be a Joke

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Wednesday, June 4.—The Chronicle's Belfast correspondent says that the customs authorities there have seized twelve cases containing a quantity of rifles, apparently of modern manufacture, landed by steamer from Manchester. The cases did not bear the name of any consignee, being simply directed "to order," and described as containing an electrical plant.

The Chronicle says that the cases seem to have been sent to Belfast for the purpose of being seized, either as a practical joke or a political advertisement.

LIES! MAYOR CRIES AT CURRAN REPORT

Calls Four Aldermen Who Voted for Waldo's Removal Pitiful Little Scamps.

POLICE REFORMED BY HIM

Of 19 Old Inspectors Only 6 Remain on the Force, He Says—Four Are in Prison, Buckner Retorts.

While Police Commissioner Waldo had never a word to say yesterday on the subject of the Curran Committee report recommending his removal from office for unfitness, Mayor Gaynor, who appointed Waldo to office, had a great deal to say, and said it with considerable heat.

The Mayor took occasion to refer to four members of the Curran Committee as "whelps," "scamps," and "pitiful little political fellows," who were mentally and morally so much inferior to the Police Commissioner that Waldo could carry a cartload of them in his breeches pocket without knowing they were there.

The pitiful four are Henry H. Curran, Chairman of the committee, whose recent libel suit against Mayor Gaynor was settled by an apology from the defendant; Ralph Folks, Fusion leader of the Board of Aldermen; O. Grant Esterbrook, and James Hamilton. Alderman Curran spoke for the four when he said:

"Just by way of a little friendly advice I'd suggest that those issuing statements for Mr. Waldo sail a little closer to the wind until the committee's entire report is in. Section 2, dealing with gambling and prostitution, will be ready to-morrow and may contain some eye-openers."

By a mere hair's breadth it appears a fifth Alderman on the Curran Committee escaped the Mayor's ire. This was Alderman Downing, who refused to vote for or against the report in the committee meeting on Monday.

"I had no objection to any part of the report," said Alderman Downing. "I merely objected to the piecemeal procedure and was in favor of voting on all five sections of the report at one time. If the other four sections are as good as the first, I certainly will vote for all of them when the vote is called for next Monday. There is no reason why I should want to stand up for Waldo. In fact, I think he was very discourteous to the Aldermen."

Mayor Gaynor's statement follows:

Calls It a Tissue of Falsehoods.

What have I to say about the report of the four Aldermen? What is the use of saying anything? For three and a half years, in the midst of many distracting things, and while I have been working and brooding over some of the largest things afoot anywhere in the world, I have found time to work out some large reforms in the Police Department, larger than in any other department, as the people of the city are now beginning to see. And during all that time certain little people have been nagging at me and trying to fret me. And these four pitiful little Aldermen now come in at the beginning of the Summer with their tissue of falsehoods.

No wonder the committee would not stand for it. The Board of Aldermen will not stand for it. There are some honorable men in that board who would not stand for such a base thing. And these four pitiful little political fellows think they are doing some great campaign work for next Fall. Let them wait and see.

They want to have Waldo removed. They had better pass a resolution removing themselves and slink out of sight. Poor little fellows. Mentally and morally Waldo could carry a whole cartload of them in his breeches pocket without knowing that they were there.

Just look at this statement in this report which says that when written complaints come in from citizens accusing Inspectors and Captains of wrongdoing the course is to refer the complaint to the officer accused to investigate himself. Just think of an infamous falsehood like that being put in an official document. There never was any such thing in the Police Department, even in its worst days.

I receive here weekly a bushel of letters concerning police government, and the Commissioner receives a like number. Practically all of them are anonymous. Most of them are false, and even malicious. They mention houses and places where they say some violation of law is going on. Of course those complaints are sent to the Captain and Inspector to investigate and report on. What else could be done with them?

But the investigation does not end there. Many of these complaints were read in evidence before the Aldermanic Committee, together with the fact that they were referred to the Inspector or the Captain, but this lying report is that they were complaints charging the Inspector or Captain with wrongdoing, and that they were referred to the accused officer to investigate himself.

It is hardly credible that four men would be got to utter such a falsehood, especially in writing and in an official document.

And look at this, which says that Waldo refused to allow them to see the records and letters of the Police Department. By law these records and letters are shielded from publicity. But when this little committee was appointed I directed that all of my letters, all of Waldo's letters, that everything be thrown open to them. I was perfectly conscious that there was not a wrong thing to be found, although they were letters written under the privacy of the law. I did not take the trouble to look up my letters or Waldo's letters to see what they were. I just turned the whole thing over to this committee, and they have not been able to put their finger on a single thing out of the way. But they invent this wicked and wilful falsehood that Waldo tried to conceal the records from them. Poor, miserable little scamps. But what is the use mentioning it?

He's Not Annoyed by Them.

I have suffered all this nagging now for three and a half years without manifesting any annoyance, and I do not wish to manifest any now. It is my good fortune to be of a disposition which is submissive to whatever happens. I am always able to say, even when the worst happens, that I am content, since everything comes along according to the will of Providence. And so I will not manifest any annoyance now, because in fact I feel none.

I do not care what this little committee says. I intend to go right on with my work. There is so much to do, and so little time to do it. But in due time it will be found that all those who have tried to create insubordination in this splendid force of 10,000 men will go on to the wall. The people of this city will never suffer such a thing. A few grafters have been exposed among them. Does that surprise anybody?

I started in to get rid of the grafters. I so openly announced. As we seized infamous houses the men and women proprietors began to disclose graft which they had been paying for twenty years, and even more, on and on. Only two revelations of graft which occurred within these last four years came out. The rest was of years gone by. And all was forced out after the enforcement of the law by the Police Commissioner against corrupt people, by seizing their places, and putting them out of business. As soon as their houses were seized they began to make disclosures. No disclosure was made in any other way.

And yet because those few grafters have been disclosed, the whole force has been unmercifully attacked. These four little Aldermen have caused witnesses to disclose grafting as long as twenty years ago, and are trying to attribute it to the present for political purposes.

At the beginning I was about myself to institute a sort of a judicial inquiry into the Police Department. I was going to sit a couple of days a week, in the midst of all my other work, and call witnesses. I believe I could have this little Aldermanic committee was appointed. I then saw that of course it would never do for me to be conducting a public investigation at the same time. To beset the force on all sides adversely would have broken down its discipline.

Through it all the Commissioner and the Mayor have worked with the force, and told them from day to day that they were not to be blamed and condemned for the few grafters among them, certainly not over twenty-five to fifty all told, and they the remnant of days gone by. We have stood with the force and preserved its discipline, and meanwhile worked out great reforms in the force, and I am able to say that the force was never in better discipline than it is to-day.

But what would have happened if we had all turned against them? Why, the 9,950 honest men on the force are not to be condemned because there are still a remnant of old grafters among them, who have been plying their trade for a generation. We have got rid of them one by one, by steady work in the midst of all this clamor.

Only Six Old Inspectors Remain.

How many people know that of the nineteen Inspectors who were on the force when I became Mayor only six of them remain to-day? One by one we have got rid of them and put men of the new school in their places, upon whom we rely.

As I have said, I do not much care that the Governor vetoed the bill allowing us to appoint Deputy Commissioners. The inspectors are nearly all new men, upon whom we have every reason to rely. The work has been done without the help of any little Aldermanic committee or any contemptible little political district leaders who are going around denouncing the police because their gambling houses and their worse houses have been closed up. It has been done steadily from day to day under the most adverse circumstances.

But we do not find fault. We intend to go right on. It has been my experience in life that when I did best I was condemned most by every petty little political whelp and scamp in the community.

Emory R. Buckner, counsel for the Curran Committee, delved into the 4,000-odd pages of the committee's records of testimony when he had read a copy of the Mayor's statement.

"The report of the committee has been drawn with the same care and the same regard for evidence as an indictment," he said when asked if he had anything to say in reply to the Mayor. "Every charge in it is supported by testimony in the record of the committee's hearings, some of which testimony will be summarized in other sections of the report still to come. The rest is open to any one to read. We are here to say that the charges are based on sworn testimony."

Mr. Buckner referred particularly to the Mayor's denunciation of the charge that citizens' letters of complaint against Captains and Inspectors had been turned over to those officers for investigation. On Page 4,265 he found this testimony of V. V. O'Daniel, a special investigator of the Bureau of Municipal Research:

Q.—Have you been looking up the records for the last eighteenth months or so with the idea of discovering if any considerable number of graft complaints were referred either to the person charged or to some one in close touch with him? A.—I have. We find 285 such complaints in Manhattan.

Q.—Graft complaints? A.—Yes, alleged graft on the part of officers.

Q.—During how long a period? A.—During fourteen months; 15 of the 285 were referred to special squads for investigation, 270 were referred either to the officers accused or to their immediate superiors, 206 were referred simply for information without any request for reports.

Q.—Then in the 64 cases they wanted to know the verdict of self-investigation? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you find any verdict of guilty? A.—None at all.

Mr. O'Daniel, in a special report to the Curran Committee concerning the handling of complaints at Police Headquarters, referred to a complaint dated April 9, 1912, which appeared in an anonymous letter addressed to Commissioner Waldo. The complainant charged in this letter that Herman Rosenthal, the gambler, was telling other persons that he did not fear the Police Commissioner because he had protection from Lieut. Becker, and that Becker and Rose were collecting graft. This letter was referred to Becker for investigation by order of Waldo, and Becker replied in a formal report that he had never accepted graft from any one.

While Police Commissioner Waldo refrained from discussing the situation in any way, it was said at Police Headquarters that a number of confidential men had been put to work to go over all communications from the Curran investigators. The Commissioner, it was said, was getting ready the material for a reply to the charges. As an answer to the charge that the Aldermen had been blocked in their investigation, it was said, the Commissioner would produce no less than 3,000 written requests for specific material in the files of Headquarters, each of which had been granted and each one of which bore the O K of the Commissioner.

The last of the five sections of the Curran report will probably be released by Saturday, and the report as a whole, if it is passed by the committee, will go before the Board of Aldermen next Tuesday. Meantime Alderman Curran, representing the Fusionists, and Alderman Dowling, representing Tammany, will be busy canvassing for votes. The regular party vote is 41 Fusionists against 37 Tammany men, and if the report is adopted it will be by a narrow margin.

NO POLITICS, SAYS BUCKNER.

Tells Republican Club He Is Simply Giving Out Police Records.

Emory R. Buckner, the counsel to the Curran Aldermanic committee, was the chief speaker last night at the meeting of the Republican Club of the Fifteenth Assembly District at 2,228 Broadway, of which the new leader is Lloyd D. Stryker. A large meeting hall was crowded to the doors when Mr. Buckner was introduced. Mr. Buckner said he was not present to play politics, and that the work of the Curran Committee in its full 4,800 pages of testimony did not reveal a political question. He said:

"I have no evidence that only twenty-five or fifty men in the Police Department are corrupt. I do know there are more corrupt men than there should be. What do you care what the Aldermen do with this report—whether they adopt it or not? What is the matter with the department? All the past Commissioners have said from time to time that they have been tolerated by the rank and file of the department.

"We have discovered methods in the administration of the Police Department that would not be tolerated in any business house."

Mr. Buckner then read a letter dated April 9, 1912, which he said arrived sometime before the Rosenthal murder, in which a citizen asked the Police Department to investigate the gambling house of Rosenthal and declared in it that Jack Rose was Lieut. Becker's collector. This particular letter was referred to Lieut. Becker for investigation and report.

"On April 9, 1912, some months before Sweeney ever was indicted," Mr. Buckner said, "one Dennis Sweeney, an Inspector of police, got a letter saying there was a gambling house on Eighth Avenue near 125th Street, in that case Sweeney investigated himself and exonerated himself.

"On October 11, 1911, Mayor Gaynor received a letter concerning the same place, declaring that 'Doty' was paying $500 a month protection money to Lieut. Duffy, the collector for the Inspector. This letter was sent to Inspector Sweeney for investigation and report, and he reported that there was no Lieut. Duffy in his command. He did not mention that he had a Sergeant Duffy, who goes to trial on Thursday."

Mr. Buckner was interrupted frequently by hearty applause.

Archbishop of York Points to the Example of the United States.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, June 3.—The Archbishop of York, addressing the annual conference of the Mothers' Union on the sanctity of marriage and the movement of a considerable body of public opinion toward relaxing the strictness of the present marriage law, deprecated the idea of embarking upon a course of adventure in regard to marriage legislation.

This, he said, had already excited profound disquiet among the people of America, who embarked upon it long ago.

Asquith Memorialized to Give Them More Civil Service Jobs.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, June 3.—Several distinguished men and women have sent Premier Asquith a memorial urging an increase in the number of women employes of the civil service, and asking that women clerks be made eligible for promotion in the same manner as men, and also allowed to enter the higher divisions of the service, especially those departments which are concerned with women and children, with many conditions of home life, and with the domestic management of institutions.

The memorial also urges that women should be eligible for scientific and other specialist appointments, especially in State museums, and, finally, that a woman should be appointed a member of the Civil Service Commission.

The service will be begun by two steamers, the Kristianiafjord and the Bergensfjord, of 16,000 tons each. The owners will receive a State subvention of $268,000, but this in the near future will be increased to $1,608,000.

Claims of Englishwomen to Practice Law to be Argued To-day.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, June 3.—The claim of Englishwomen to become solicitors will be argued to-morrow in the Chancery Division. Four women have applied for permission to attend the preliminary examination to enable them to qualify as solicitors, and the Law Society has refused their claim on the ground of sex.

While four separate actions have been begun against the Law Society, that of Miss Bebb has been taken as a test case. She is the daughter of the Principal of St. David's College, Lampeter, and took first class in law at St. Hugh's College, Oxford.

"What Can THE BRITANNICA Do For Me?"

That is a FAIR question; here is OUR answer:

THE NEW ENCYCLOPAEDIA BRITANNICA is indispensable to you because of the very complexity of the civilization of which you are a member.

There is so much to learn. The most successful man and the least successful is just a fly on a big wheel—a mere unit in a vast universe of strange interests and diverse aims and activities. It is obvious that no man nowadays can carry in his head all that he needs to know of the vast realm of knowledge that lies outside his own experience. No ordinary books will help him, for they are mere fragments.

But modern ingenuity here comes to his assistance. A great book has been devised and perfected, the function of which is Utility. Every man can now increase the sum total of his knowledge by resorting to this useful and never-failing storehouse of universal information, and drawing upon it with the same certainty that millions of people in New York every day draw water from the Croton reservoir simply by turning the nearest faucet.

No matter what your situation in life—whether you are a millionaire or a wage-earner, a professional man or a clerk in a store, the head of a bank or a bank clerk, the head of a household, a retail merchant or a young person just starting a career,

The Encyclopaedia Britannica can help you to solve your problems, to add to your efficiency, and to get the most out of yourself.

The "BRITANNICA HABIT"

If you will keep this work at your elbow and use it systematically—if you will acquire "The Britannica habit," so to speak, it will help you:

to talk intelligently on current affairs or past history to answer your children's questions to understand the operation of the mechanical contrivances by which you are surrounded to learn more about your own work or the business of your employer to realize the purpose of the laws that govern you to appreciate the things of beauty that add to one's enjoyment to know nature—the whole of animate and inanimate creation to tell whether the things you buy are well made or badly made to have an insight into the physical mechanism of your body and the laws it obeys to study the course of human events as they occur or are related to what has gone before to estimate the importance of the social, artistic, or political movements of the day to supplement your education by reading what is "worth while" to ascertain how things are made—how what you use, handle or wear is manufactured, put together, prepared, or obtained to provide entertainment for your leisure moments that will give you permanent satisfaction to become acquainted with the personalities that have made history or achieved distinction in all lands and all ages to develop new interests and broaden your outlook to get quickly at the truth in settling a controversy to arrive at a just opinion of a work of art, a piece of literature or music to meet emergencies affecting your health, or your household, such as illness or accident to master a game or increase your skill in some sport by the advice of an expert to guide your children in their reading and studies to form an independent judgment of work done for you or advice given you to plan journeys, or add to the enjoyment of travel in our own or foreign countries to have a sound knowledge of the peoples of the globe, of the commerce and industry, beliefs, institutions, customs of nearby or distant races and nations to cultivate your taste with reference to ornament or painting, sculpture, music or the drama to pursue studies on a systematic plan in any chosen field to obtain the correct answer to any one of more than half a million questions of daily occurrence—questions which begin with How, Why, and When, What, Where, and Who?

Is This Book TOO GOOD For You?

Do you know of any other means of securing so much reliable information at so low a price, and do you not know that unreliable information is dear at any price?

If you have sons and daughters do you want to give them mis-information? Is it not a fact that many so-called children's books are made merely to sell and that their contents are unreliable, misleading and of unknown authorship?

"There is not a single family having children," writes a Britannica subscriber, "that should be without a reference book on general subjects, and the head of the family cannot be too careful what books are used for reference. Some books are published to sell, some are gotten up with years of tireless labor with the main idea of being of value in actual work. I have waited for three years until the new Britannica was ready. I want to say without reserve that I am more than justified."

29 volumes; 40,000 articles; 44,000,000 words of text. Issued by the Press of the University of Cambridge, (England.) Printed on thin India paper or ordinary book paper—5 styles of binding—Sold for Cash, Deferred Cash (4, 8 or 12 months) or for Monthly Payments.

KRAEMER PICTURES BRING $25,103

French Pastels the Feature of Yesterday's Sale, Bouchers Especially.

ALL PRICES UNDER $2,000

Two Huets Go for $1,640, and a Portrait of Mme. Vigee-Lebrun Is Knocked Down for $1,000.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

PARIS, June 3.—Not a single picture realized $2,000 at to-day's continuation of the sale of the pictures in the collection of Eugene Kraemer. The prices realized, however, were regarded with satisfaction, and the total of the day's auction was $25,103.

The pastels were taken up to-day, and two companion works of Boucher, which were valued at $900, were sold for $562. One of these showed a young girl lying on a cushion of blue damask at the moment of awakening, while the other represented a girl asleep, with a chaplet of wild flowers on her head.

A portrait by an artist of the French school of the eighteenth century was expected to bring $300, but sold as high as $1,060, and one of Mme. Vigée-Lebrun in a straw hat, trimmed with white feathers and wild flowers, and clad in a low-cut rose gown and a black mantle, was knocked down for $1,000. Perronneau's "Portrait of a Man," dated 1747, was sold for $700.

The drawings were then put up, and Besse's curious representation of a school of the time of Louis XIII. roused enough archaeological interest to go at $1,200, though it was valued at only half that sum. It was thus described in the catalogue:

"In a large hall, severely furnished and decorated, serving at once as a school, dining and sleeping room, some boys and girls stand at a table supported on trestles. They write under the direction of a master. Some little girls are grouped around a young governess and nearn their lessons, and on the left, seated in an armchair on a little platform before the fire, an aged professor with a severe manner questions a little boy. Though an open door in the background on the left two persons are seen walking through the garden to the entrance of the hall."

Boucher's "Venus in the Clouds," which is drawn in colors, brought $580. It shows the goddess half reclining and playing with a necklace of pearls. Her draperies have fallen away from her bust and limbs, and her hair is bound by a red ribbon.

For Casanova's "Cavalry Charge" $604 was given, and for the portrait of Antoine de Silly, Comte de la Roche, the high price of $1,280 was bid. Only the head of this drawing is finished, the bust being merely sketched in, but the delicacy of the draughtsmanship of the face, with its two-pointed beard and the cap bordered with fur and decorated with a plume, renders it of great value and interest.

A drawing of the Italian school of a fête given at Pisa in 1785, in honor of the Grand Duke of Tuscany, fetched $680. It shows a gay crowd decked out for the dance in a fine hall. Two orchestras are ready for the word to begin, and the picture is full of life.

For two companion pictures by Huet $1,640 was bid. In the first, "The Brook," a peasant sits with his dog beside him on the banks of a little stream meandering through a wood; in the other, "The Cottage," the cottage is seen on the left, while a man wades knee deep in a brook.

Mallet's "Assembly" brought $880. It represents a reception in a drawing room paneled in gray. Over the doors are mythological pictures, and the guests are seen talking and laughing together.

$530 FOR EVELYN'S DIARY.

Good Prices Paid for Books at the Huth Sale.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, June 3.—In the Huth library sale at Sotheby's to-day "Le Faccecieux Reveille-Matin des Esprits Melancholiques," a small octavo printed at Utrecht in 1654, and in old red morocco binding by Roger Payne, sold for $560. It cost Henry Huth only $26.25 in 1860.

"Memoirs of John Evelyn, comprising His Diary from 1641 to 1705-6," edited by W. Bray, 1818, extra illustrated, brought $530. Many of the additional portraits are early and rare.

The "Directorium Inquisitorium" of Nicholas Eymericus, a first edition on vellum of one of the earliest printed books on the practice of the Inquisition, was knocked down for $520. Brunet does not quote the sale of any copy even on paper, and on vellum it appears to have been hitherto quite undescribed.

Peterman Etterlyn's "Kronica," small folio, Basel, 1507, went for $190. One of its woodcuts represents William Tell shooting the apple from his son's head.

"Everie Woman in Her Humor, a Comedy," first and only edition, London, 1609, was bought for $440. It cost Henry Huth only $15 in 1869.

"Expositio hymno," a small quarto printed by Wynkyn de Worde in Fleet Street, London, in 1509, brought $300. It contains a woodcut of a master and scholars on title page, and the printer's large Caxton device on reverse of last leaf.

J. Esquemeling's "De Americaensche Zee-Roovers," small quarto, Amsterdam, 1678, was knocked down for $205. It is the first edition of the original text. This work is best known by its English title, "Buccaniers of America," a copy of which, printed in London in 1684-5, brought $245. It contains, among other narratives, "The Unparallel'd Exploits of Sir Henry Morgan, Our English Jamaican Hero, Who Sack'd Puerto Vico, burnt Panama," &c. John Esquemeling, the author, was one of the buccaneers.

Geffrey Fenton's "Certaine Tragicall Discourses written oute of Frenche and Latin," small quarto, London, 1567, went for $300. It cost Henry Huth $63 in 1864. It is the extremely rare first edition.

TARIFF RETALIATION SUGGESTED IN BERLIN

And Rumor Says England and Germany Will Act Jointly Respecting Panama Fair.

BOYCOTT TALK IS STRONG

Manufacturers and Merchants Protest to Government Against Underwood Bill's Rules.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, June 3.—According to information from a high official quarter, German's opposition to the "inquisitorial" features of the new United States tariff law will not only take the form of an eventual boycotting of the San Francisco Exposition, but may also assume the aspect of retaliation on the same line of tariff legislation. Strong pressure to this end will be brought to bear on the imperial authorities.

German manufacturers and merchants are lodging the bitterest protests against the rules which would compel foreign firms to show their books to the American customs officials. The Government is lending a sympathetic ear to these complaints.

The feeling in Berlin against the United States in regard to the tariff, which has always been strong, was never more intense than at present. There is special soreness over the granting to Canada free entrance for white paper and wood pulp and the withholding of similar concessions from Germany, although the latter is asserted to be entitled to the same treatment under "the most favored nation" clause.

So far as San Francisco is concerned German industry, with the exception of some minor mechanical branches, is solidly opposed to participation. The iron, steel, and chemical trades will hardly participate under any circumstances. They say it would be a waste of time, money, and effort.

It is also pointed out that America has failed to evince any special interest in the various industrial expositions organized in Germany in recent years.

No decision will be made in regard to San Francisco until the tariff situation is cleared up. It is rumored here that England and Germany have entered into an informal agreement to act jointly. All the European Governments, in fact, are alleged to be in touch on this matter. If England declines to exhibit at San Francisco, Germany will certainly follow suit.

COUNT BERNSTORFF BACK.

He Declines to Discuss Threat to Boycott the Canal Exposition.

Count Johann von Bernstorff, German Ambassador at Washington, returned last night on the North German Lloyd steamship Kronprinzessin Cecilie from a hurried visit to Berlin, where he went to give some information to Emperor William on the proposed tariff changes. He admitted that he had discussed the tariff with the Emperor, but declined to go into details.

"I hurried back," said Count von Bernstorff, "because I have to be at Princeton University on June 10 to take my honorary degree, which I believe is an LL. D." The Ambassador was accompanied by his son, Count Gunter Bernstorff, who will spend six months in New York studying the banking system as a part of his qualification for the Diplomatic Service.

Before the Ambassador left Berlin it was stated that he had been instructed by his Government to inform President Wilson and Secretary of State Bryan that Germany would boycott the Panama-Pacific Exposition of 1915 if German protests against certain features of the new American Tariff bill were unheeded. Count Bernstorff declined to discuss this subject.

On June 15 the German Ambassador will come to New York to attend a "Kommers," which will probably be held at the Hotel Astor, where patriotic Germans will attend to drink beer out of big steins and celebrate the twenty-fifth anniversary of their Emperor's reign.

$4,200 PAID FOR A BEDSTEAD

Chippendale Mahogany Piece the Chief Feature at the Wilson Sale.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, June 3.—At the second day of the Wilson sale at Christie's to-day, $1,205 was paid for a Georgian mahogany table with one drawer, having cabriole legs carved with lions' masks and shells, and claw feet.

A Chippendale mahogany bedstead, with fluted posts wreathed with flowers and fruit, and supported on clawed feet, the head of the bed and the cornice being pierced and carved with compositions of scrolls and foliage, was sold for $4,200. This piece included a coverlet, cornice, and pair of curtains of Chinese embroidery, worked with baskets and sprays of flowers and birds in colored silks on a cream ground.

WALTER DE MUMM MARRIED.

His Bride, Miss Scoville, Given Away by Her Brother-in-Law.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, June 3.—Walter de Mumm of Rheims, France, was married to-day at St. George's, Hanover Square, to Miss Frances von Bergen Scoville, daughter of Courtenay Kenneday Scoville of Seneca, Kan., and sister of Mrs. Louis Treadwell of Albany, N. Y.

The bride was given away by her brother-in-law. She was attired in white silver brocade and had no bridesmaids. The best man was Hermann Mumm. Among the guests were Anthony J. Drexel, the Earl and Countess of Portarlington, Count Festetics, Chauncey McKeever, and Mrs. Charles B. Wright.

Much interest was taken in the de Mumm-Scoville wedding owing to the dramatic incident which occurred last December in Paris, when, in the course of a struggle with Mrs. Marie Van Rensimer Barnes, an American woman, Walter de Mumm received two rather serious bullet wounds. Mrs. Barnes afterward disappeared, and de Mumm did not prosecute her. The attack upon him was said to have been brought about by his announcement that he had come to bid her farewell. Reports came from London yesterday that Mrs. Barnes had threatened to kill herself as soon as De Mumm married, but no news came of her having done so.

LONDON CELEBRATES KING'S BIRTHDAY

Picturesque "Trooping of the Colors" the Principal Spectacle.

GOES TO THE DERBY TO-DAY

Where a Brilliant Crowd Expects to See His Horse Beaten—Craganour the Favorite.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, June 3.—On the eve of the Derby the visitors assembled here with the object of witnessing the greatest of English sporting events had to-day a feast of attractions.

The chief were the celebrations in honor of the King's forty-eighth birthday. The most picturesque ceremony in London was the "trooping of the colors" on the Horse Guards Parade, at which their Majesties and many other members of the royal family were present.

London was gay with flags, and the day was kept with parades, reviews, levees, salutes, and banquets in the naval and military centres of England.

To-morrow the King will go to Epsom with a countless army of his subjects to see the Derby, and the event marks the climax of the London season. The capital was never before crowded with so brilliant a throng. The weather prospects are fine—sunny and very warm during the greater part of the day, with thunder in the afternoon or evening.

According to the latest betting, the favorite for the race is C. Bower Ismay's Craganour, which will be ridden by "Johnny" Reiff; but the French horse Nimbus, whose jockey is the American, Milton Henry, is one of the most heavily backed. The King is represented by Anmer, but his chances are considered so little that the betting against him is 66 to 1. Richard Croker at the eleventh hour accepted the hopelessness of trying to win with Knight's Key, which was accordingly scratched.

DIAMONDS VANISH BELOW DEAD LINE

Isaac R. Theise Tells Police He Was Robbed of Gems Worth $37,500.

TAKEN FROM ROLLTOP DESK

Maiden Lane Dealer Says He Was Out of the Room Less Than Three Minutes.

A story of diamond stealing such as Maiden Lane has not heard in years alarmed the veteran dealers in gems along that thoroughfare yesterday. The story also startled Mark Sumner, a Police Department detective, who has stood guard along the old-time dead line, two blocks north of Maiden Lane, and in Maiden Lane itself for more than a decade. Detective Sumner was the first police official to hear about the diamond stealing, and late last night he was still at work upon the case without having been able to find a single satisfactory clue.

The theft, according to the story told by Isaac R. Theise, who has been for eight years a diamond jobber at 47 and 49 Maiden Lane, could not have been more mysterious if the diamonds had evaporated into thin air right under the eyes of their owner.

The value of the diamonds taken, according to Theise, is $37,500. In the collection were unmounted gems worth $30,000, and mounted gems, a few of which were the property of customers of the diamond jobber, worth $7,500. Some of the diamonds were mere specks, while others ranged up to three carats in size.

No Chance for Insurance.

At first inability to believe Theise's story marked the progress of the police investigation, but no possible reason could be assigned for the telling of a story of a theft that was so improbable, especially as data made public by Theise shut him off from recovering insurance on the gems, which it would have been possible to collect if the theft had occurred in a manner only slightly varying from the version as given.

The diamonds disappeared, according to Theise, from the inside of his rolltop desk in the back room of his office on the eleventh floor of the building at 47 and 49 Maiden Lane. He put them in a yellow bag inside the desk, and locked the desk at three minutes to 9 o'clock. He turned his back for a moment, going into the next room for less than three minutes, and when he returned his diamonds were gone. He made the discovery by unlocking the roll-top desk which he had locked with the diamonds inside of it three minutes before. Both bag and diamonds were missing, although nothing else in the desk had been disturbed.

Theise said he had heard no one in the room. The only clerk employed, Louis Blog, had not yet come to work, and did not come for half an hour.

The only hallway leading from Mr. Theise's offices ran beside the room into which he had stepped from the room containing his roll-top desk. Mr. Theise was certain he heard no one pass along this hall.

Theise ran to the elevator shaft and rang the elevator bells for both the cars. Both responded, but their operators insisted they had taken no one down from the eleventh floor after bringing Mr. Theise up. The diamond jobber then appealed to the elevator starter and the building Superintendent to keep a close lookout for a man with a yellow bag.

Tenants on all of the floors were questioned. All said they had heard no one coming down the stairs. The situation baffled the detectives and also Mr. Theise, who fainted when he returned to his office.

Louis Blog, the clerk, came. All he could tell was that he had been to the safe deposit vaults at 170 Broadway, where Mr. Theise was in the habit of taking his yellow bag of jewels each night for safekeeping, and found that the bag was gone. This was most unusual, he said, as Mr. Theise seldom came for the jewels himself, but depended on having his clerk bring them with him when he came to work.

Mr. Blog said the people in charge of the safety deposit vaults told him that Mr. Theise had been there before him and carried the satchel away.

Thought Thief Preceded Him.

After Mr. Theise had been revived he said positively that no man came down the hallway behind him, for he surely would have heard the footsteps. He concluded, therefore, that whoever took the jewels must have let himself into the office early in the morning, and must have been secreted behind a door or behind the rolltop desk when he entered with the yellow satchel.

Acting on this theory, Detective Sumner telephoned to the Oak Street Station for police reserves. When they arrived he had the building surrounded and had a search made of the entire building from basement to roof. It did not disclose the presence anywhere in the building of a yellow bag of jewels or any person who did not belong there.

Theise was taken before Deputy Commissioner Dougherty, where he was questioned for more than an hour. He told the Deputy Commissioner that he lived at 32 Fuller Place, Brooklyn, and that before he became a diamond jobber eight years ago he had been a diamond salesman in Maiden Lane for many years.

"I ordinarily trust my salesman and manager, Louis Blog, to bring the bag of diamonds to the office in the morning," he said, "but to-day I wanted to get the mounters started early on a job because a man had come in late Monday and had ordered a diamond ring which he wanted for a wedding anniversary party to-night. He had picked out the diamond and was to call for it this morning. So I left home early and called for the satchel myself.

"I wanted to get this diamond out and have it mounted at once. On the elevator with me was one man, who went on to the top floor, which is one floor above my office, but everybody else got off at lower floors. This one man I did not know."

After Theise had told his story Commissioner Dougherty detailed Lieut. Armstrong and fifteen detectives, all of whom have had experience in the downtown diamond belt, to work upon the case. It was said that insurance on diamonds calls for payment of losses only for thefts while the diamonds are being transported through the streets or are en route from dealer to customer. For this reason, it was said, Theise could not recover for a theft occurring after he had brought the diamonds into his own office.

Reporters who called on Mr. Theise yesterday afternoon were shown the rolltop desk which was said to be locked. The reporters rolled back the lid without difficulty, after which they found that part of the lock had been broken away. Mr. Theise said this break was an old one, and that he knew the desk lock was not secure.

At Police Headquarters an investigation showed that five attempts at safe-blowing had been made in the building where Theise had his offices, one of the attempts having been made on a safe in the office occupied by Theise. It was not successful. Of three safe-blowing attempts in 1911 all were failures, and of two in 1912 the second was successful, the safe of Immanuel S. Rose having been blown open on Feb. 12 of that year and $14,500 taken. The building adjoins the Jewelers' Board of Trade Building.

"ARMENONVILLE" IS OPEN.

The Knickerbocker Opens its Summer Restaurant—Attractive Features

The main restaurant and the grill room of the Hotel Knickerbocker closed for the Summer on Monday, and night before last "Armenonville," the Summer restaurant of the hotel, on the second floor, with its "terrace," was opened for the season. Many well-known persons were among the diners.

The restaurant, as usual, is decorated after the French fashion in Summer of an open air restaurant, with its walls in an agreeable light shade of lattice work, and the first luncheon of the season yesterday drew a great many there. All the force of headwaiters and captains from the main restaurant and grill room, known by name to every "diner out," were on hand, and the cold soup "in jelly," as you sometimes hear visitors indicate it, was in demand. The sight of diners in the open air and the strains of the music that came out from the big room proved too much for the office forces in the tall buildings, who spent most of the midday interval and some of the afternoon gazing and listening from their windows.

Need Old Clothes for Prisoners.

The Prison Association of New York, 135 East Fifteenth Street, urgently appeals for men's sack suits, underwear, and shoes.

It is felt that in nearly every family there are partly-worn suits that would be of great help to released prisoners who cannot afford to buy them. The Prison Association will gladly send for articles within the city limits in reply to a message by telephone or mail.

Rosenstock Can Swim.

THE NEW YORK TIMES was in error yesterday in publishing the name of Felix Metzger Rosenstock as the student at Columbia who had had his degree held up for not meeting the swimming requirements of the university.

Mr. Rosenstock is not a candidate for a degree, being in the sophomore class, and is a good swimmer. The correct name of the student whose degree is withheld because he cannot swim is William Rosenblatt.

CAN'T HINDER EGYPT SELLING ANTIQUITIES

Washington Decides It Has No Official Status to Warrant Protest for Metropolitan Museum.

DIPLOMAT ACTS PERSONALLY

France Alone, Officials Hold, Can Oppose Sale of Objects, Largely Collected by Americans.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 3.—The State Department has practically decided that it would not be justified in giving official indorsement to the efforts of the Metropolitan Museum of Art of New York to prevent a proposed sale of half the antiquities in the great museum at Cairo. Many of the collections of Egyptian relics there were gathered by expeditions financed by the Metropolitan Museum.

After considering the protests of the authorities of the Metropolitan Museum, the department has decided that it can only leave the matter in the hands of Peter Augustus Jay, diplomatic agent and Consul General at Cairo.

Much indignation has been aroused among American antiquarians by the project of the Egyptian Government to sell half the finds turned over to it by foreign expeditions, including those financed by American organizations. It is understood that during his visit to Egypt last Winter J. P. Morgan interested himself in the attempt to prevent the sale, but nothing has reached here to indicate how far Mr. Morgan went in the matter.

The proposal for the sale came from Lord Kitchener, Sirdar of Egypt and commander of the British military forces in that country. The Egyptian expedition of the Metropolitan Museum made a protest against this and against a law, framed by Lord Kitchener, which sought to prevent an antiquarian expedition from working on more than two sites at the same time.

The case dates back to the time when the joint Franco-British protectorate over Egypt was ended, France relinquishing all her rights except those connected with the Department of Antiquities of the Egyptian Government. This interest of France in the Department of Antiquities was observed by Kitchener's predecessors, Lord Cromer and Sir Eldon Gorst, the museum being left under French control.

By the terms of its concession, the Egyptian expedition of the Metropolitan Museum of Art has regularly turned over to the museum of Cairo half of the results of its searches, the tacit understanding being that these relics would remain in the museum for reference and study.

Officials here think the Egyptian Government has a right to dispose of the contents of the museum as it sees fit. But even if it has no such right, it is agreed the dispute is a matter for adjustment between France and Great Britain. The Government of the United States, it is held, can have no say in the matter. The same view is taken of the protest of the Metropolitan Museum against the proposed law forbidding expeditions from working on more than two sites at one time. This, it is maintained, is a matter for regulation by the Egyptian Government.

The conclusion of the Government officials is that the best course is to permit Mr. Jay to continue his handling of the case as a personal matter without instructions, using his personal influence in negotiating with the proper authorities.

NOT ENOUGH BEEF FOR ALL.

America Must Stop Sending Its Cattle Abroad.

WASHINGTON, June 3.—The demand for beef far exceeds the supply and high prices are the result, says a bulletin issued to-day by the Department of Agriculture. The shortage in the supply of meat-producing animals, too, is becoming steadily greater and the country is warned that it is facing a period of short production of meat.

In the last six years there has been a decline of more than thirty per cent. in the number of beef cattle in the United States, according to the Department, and already the first three months of this year there has been an approximate decrease of thirteen per cent. in the number of meat animals killed under Government supervision when compared with the same three months of 1912. Estimates of the Department give the number of beef cattle in the United States on Jan. 1, 1907, as 61,566,000 and at the beginning of the present year as 36,080,000.

Prices paid for cattle, sheep, lambs and hogs last year were much higher than in the preceding year.

"The year 1912," says the Department, "was a year of high prices for all classes of food animals. With the diminished production in the home market, there no longer is a surplus for export. The time has come when we must conserve our meat supply."

TOOK 3 BICHLORIDE TABLETS

Sixteen-Year-Old Girl Taken to Prison Ward of Bellevue.

A girl, who is described as Virginia Hepper, 16 years old, was taken last night from 348 East Fiftieth Street to Bellevue Hospital, where she was made a prisoner charged with attempting suicide by taking bichloride of mercury tablets. The utmost secrecy was maintained at the house, and even the driver of the ambulance was told that his services were not required. The girl was taken from the third floor of the four-story brownstone structure, and the ambulance driver was not allowed to ascend above the first floor. Then he was told that the ambulance surgeon, Dr. Stetson, would be able to work without assistance. About the same time a telephone message was sent to the East Fifty-first Street Station and Patrolman Bryan was sent to the house. He was told that a girl was suffering from ptomaine poisoning and that the ambulance surgeon was present and would be able to attend to it.

Bryan, however, went upstairs, and the girl told him that she had been suffering from a headache all day and that she had taken three bichloride of mercury tablets by mistake for a headache cure. Bryan was not satisfied with the story, and put the girl under arrest in the prison ward at Bellevue Hospital.

ALDERMAN LOSES APPEAL.

Davis Must Serve Prison Term for Attempted Extortion.

ALBANY, June 3.—The Court of Appeals to-day affirmed the conviction of Percy L. Davis, a New York Alderman, sentenced to prison for not less than one year nor more than twenty months for attempted extortion.

Davis was charged with having demanded $5,000 for the suppression of an affidavit concerning Mrs. Eva E. Carroll and her son.

MRS. HARRIS TELLS OF BAKER'S WOOING

Justifies Her Action for $200,000 Against Late Congressman's Estate.

NEVER HIS HOUSEKEEPER

But Had Promise of Settlement on Her of Enough Property to Make Her Independent.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 3.—Mrs. Magnolia V. A. Horton Harris, who is suing the estate of Representative Henry M. Baker of New Hampshire for $200,000 on the ground that the two were engaged to marry and that he promised to transfer to her a large part of his property, talked of her case to-day. Mrs. Harris asserted that she and Baker had agreed to be married as soon as their wedding could be arranged conveniently, and that Baker promised to settle on her sufficient wealth to make her independent for life.

The plaintiff denied indignantly that she ever had been a nurse, companion, or housekeeper for the New Hampshire Congressman, and insisted that she was suing his estate only because he had failed to keep the agreement to settle on her a large amount. Mrs. Harris, according to statements made here to-day, is a great-great-granddaughter of the first Governor of Louisiana. She is a member of the Daughters of the American Revolution, the United Daughters of the Confederacy, and the Founders and Patriots' Society.

Mrs. Harris is the widow of D. A. Harris of Alabama, who was prominent as a Mason and is said to have been wealthy until he lost money in a mining venture. She came to Washington about two years ago, following her husband's death. She soon made the acquaintance of Representative Baker through mutual friends. She asserted this afternoon that in February, 1912, she entered his service as his secretary, assistant adviser, and agent, but that she had known him since December, 1911.

He then was 70 years old, she explained; his business and political affairs were weighing heavily on him, and he came to rely largely on her help. Mrs. Harris asserted that, having agreed to marry her, Baker gave her an engagement ring and other tokens. The wedding, she continued, was set for last Summer, but he died on May 30, 1912.

"I never saw him except in the daytime," she added. "I believe the Congressman figured that he wanted a companion and friend in his old age. He did not say it exactly that way, but that probably was his idea under the marriage agreement, in view of the disparity of our ages."

Mrs. Harris is 40.

The estate is in the hands of the New Hampshire courts. Ancillary letters have been taken out in the Probate Branch of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

COURT INSTALS REPUBLICAN

Democrat Ousted from Chief Clerkship of Kings County Court.

ALBANY, June 3.—The Court of Appeals to-day decided that John T. Rafferty, a Republican, was entitled to the office of Chief Clerk of the County Court of Kings.

The decision ousts Thomas F. Wogan, a Democratic district leader. The judgment of the Appellate Division and that of the trial term in Wogan's favor is reversed.

EXPECTS RUSH FOR NOTES.

Harris Thinks $27,000,000 State Issue Will Be Oversubscribed.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, June 3.—Deputy State Controller Harris anticipates that the bids for the $27,000,000 short term State notes, which are to be offered for sale Thursday, will be many times oversubscribed.

"The sale will be by sealed proposals, which will be received at the office of the State Controller up to 3 P. M.," said Mr. Harris. "The whole issue will be sold in full or in part to the lowest bidders. The notes mature Feb. 1, 1914, and by that time a new issue of State bonds, under the 4½ per cent. rate, will be ready for sale. The bidders will be required to specify the lowest interest rate for which they will agree to purchase these notes in whole or in part at not less than par. Upon the acceptance of the proposal the successful bidder or bidders will be required to pay for the notes at the Bank of the Manhattan Company in New York City on or prior to June 10, 1913."

The notes will bear interest from the date of payment therefor, and will be issued in amounts to suit the purchaser.

Forged Out of a Solid Billet

AFTER we imported parts direct from Lyons, France, and employed skilled French mechanics from the shops of M. Berliet to build the Berliet in America, we adhered strictly to our famous French original—except for one important feature. This was chain drive.

We gave up chain drive and improved upon Berliet design by putting in shaft drive and a full floating rear axle.

It was a daring change to make and one that required extensive factory facilities, for our engineers would not entertain a built up or two piece rear axle such as most cars, even the high priced ones, use today. So we installed extensive equipment and forged the rear axle out of a solid billet of steel by the largest steam drop hammer in the world. This hammer weighs 250,000 pounds. The dies alone weigh 12,000 pounds.

We installed gigantic machines of marvelous accuracy to bore a hole through the billet—an operation of rare care and delicacy. As a result dis-alignment—which means wear, noise, loss of power—is unknown in the Alco, and our records show that our rear axle has never given trouble.

Men who drive the Alco appreciate this rear axle in riding ease and driving comfort. Its rare qualities go a long way—in supplying that extra little engineering touch which the experienced motor car owner seeks today.

VENNER LOSES SUITS AGAINST INTERBORO

Federal Court Decides Not Only That Inter-Met Merger Is Legal, but Plaintiff Has No Rights.

ALL MORTGAGES ARE VALID

This Checks Continental Securities' Attempt to Upset Dual Subways —Monopoly Not Obnoxious.

Judge Hough handed down yesterday a decision in the Federal District Court throwing out the two suits brought by the Continental Securities Company, with which Clarence Venner is identified, against the Interborough Rapid Transit Company and a number of other traction corporations, and several individuals, including August Belmont and Thomas F. Ryan. The effect of these, if successful, would have been to declare the Interborough-Metropolitan merger illegal and the financial arrangements on which the dual subway system is based null and void. In doing so the court held that not only had the plaintiff no technical right to sue, but that the merger of which it complained was perfectly legal.

"The Metropolitan," said the court, "had exhausted the possibilities of surface transportation, and with its enormous fixed charges could not earn dividends—but subways were new and of unknown capacity, both as money raisers and money earners. It was a bold and ingenious move for the Metropolitan to put forward as a possible addition to its system connecting subways. "This was done to the detriment of the Interborough, whose managers saw plainly enough that subways must be extended if successful, not only for financial but political reasons; and to have a bold rival in any plan for such extension seemed intolerable. This is shown by the evidence as the reason for the Interborough-Metropolitan—not the suppression or existing competition, as alleged in the bill. What was wished was elimination of a rival in any future bargaining with the city for subway additions and extensions."

Judge Hough added that such a monopoly could not be held to be obnoxious, as it was subject to the control of the Public Service Commission.

"The proof shows," he said, "that since suit was begun the Second and Third Avenue street car lines, Belt Line, and Union Railway Company have become separated from the Metropolitan system, as well as several crosstown lines." He said the prevention of competition in "building new subways in Manhattan and the Bronx continues, and the recent contracts for the dual system, considered in connection with Mr. Belmont's testimony, seem to show that 'wisdom is justified of her children.'"

The second suit brought by the Continental Securities Company asked that the mortgage made by the Interborough to the Morton Trust Company on Nov. 1, 1907, be set aside as having been executed "under the baleful and unlawful influence of the Interborough-Metropolitan." Supplemental bills to this complaint asked the same fate should overtake the $300,000,000 mortgage executed by the Interborough a few months ago to enable it to carry out the dual subway system arrangement, because it was approved by votes unlawfully cast by the Interborough-Metropolitan.

The court pointed out that these contentions admittedly presupposed success in the suit for the dissolution of the Interborough-Metropolitan Company, but the Morton Trust Company, in its answer, had also contended that, even if all the allegations in the first complaint were true, the property rights created by the mortgage would be protected and the mortgage itself would be a valid obligation in favor of the bondholders under it.

"Much time has been devoted to picturing the evil result of monopoly," the court observed, "but nothing has been done toward showing that complainant had lost a dollar by exactly what Mr. Venner knew was going to be done when he caused the stock to be purchased.

"The demurrer decision held that the rights of the public and of stockholders had apparently been invaded. It now appears that no stockholder's pecuniary rights have been lessened."

'MOVIE' ORDINANCE IS VETOED BY MAYOR

Gallery Provision Cut Out of It in the Interest of the Small Theatres, He Says.

APPEALS TO BOARD'S HONOR

Asks Those Who Are Not "Under Temptation" to Pass Measure Prepared by His Commission.

Mayor Gaynor vetoed yesterday the moving picture ordinance passed recently by the Aldermen, and in a letter to the board on the subject he accused certain members of being influenced by proprietors of cheap moving picture shows who, he said, wanted an ordinance framed only for their interests. The ordinance the Mayor vetoed does not permit galleries to be erected, thereby keeping down the capacity, and the Mayor said this was a mistake. In his veto message he said:

"It is on this matter of permitting an audience of 600 that the trouble has arisen in your board. An attempt was made to defeat this provision of the ordinance and keep the audiences down to 300 or 400. I have been an onlooker during all the time that this proposed ordinance has been before you. I have, of course, seen not only the cause of the opposition, but whence it sprung.

"The cheap theatres of the city have no limitation put upon them as to audiences. They early banded together to oppose this moving picture ordinance unless this provision for an audience of 600 was cut out of it, and the audience kept down to the old number. Their purpose is purely selfish.

"As matter of fact the rivalry of the moving picture shows with an audience of 600 would not hurt the cheap theatres in the city. There is room enough for them all. But the proprietors of these cheap theatres are of a different view, and have thus far been influential enough, one way and another, and by this means and by that, to frustrate the passage of the ordinance reported by the commission.

"I trust that they shall not be able in the end to defeat it. It is time that they were told that they are not to rule in this matter. Our attempt is to make the moving picture shows of this town wholesome and safe. The proprietors of the cheap theatres cannot stand in the way and dictate to your honorable body, or to any of us, what we shall do in this matter. Let them get out of the way.

"Finally, when these theatre proprietors saw that they could not get a vote reducing the seating capacity of the moving picture shows, they bent their efforts to have the galleries cut out of them, which would accomplish the same effect. The ordinance as framed by the commission allowed a gallery, but provided that it should not have a seating capacity of more than one-fourth of the seating capacity of the whole place. The ordinance as you passsed it cuts the gallery out. The effect is that a moving picture place with a seating capacity of 600 is reduced to 450 by cutting the gallery out, one of a seating capacity of 400 is reduced to 300 by cutting the gallery out, and so on.

"Thus, in this ingenious and indirect way these proprietors of cheap theatres are getting accomplished what they could not get directly accomplished. The result is most unjust to the proprietors of moving picture shows. It means that in order to have a seating capacity of 600 it will be necessary to increase the ground space, and hence the rent, and the cost of construction. This is wrong. There is no reason for it."

The Mayor wrote that some of the Aldermen had told him the ordinance was a party measure, and that they had to vote with their party. The matter of party measures and political partisanship, he said, had been a curse to the city and should be got rid of. The Mayor added:

"I trust that my term of office shall not expire before a proper ordinance is passed. And I now go so far as to appeal to every honorable man among you, to every man among you who is not financially and personally interested, or under the temptation or control or leadership of some one who is, to dispose of this matter without regard to politicians or to parties, and pass the ordinance which the commission reported."

Succeeds Justice Bischoff as Trustee

Hasbrouck Trustee of a $53,000 fund created under the will of Alexander Ming Fisher, for the benefit of Ethel Douglas Southwick. The previous Trustee was Supreme Court Justice Henry Bischoff, who was killed on March 21 last, by an elevator accident in the Emigrant Industrial Savings Bank Building.

SEX SAVES WOMAN FROM TERM IN JAIL

Judge Denounces Miss Wingate as Perjurer Whose False Testimony Convicted a Man.

SHE RETRACTS IN COURT

Refuses to Answer Questions as to Her Career Because Evidence Might Degrade Her.

After saying that under the existing law he could not reverse the decision of Magistrate Krotel, who sentenced Joseph Raho to imprisonment of thirty days in the Workhouse for annoying women, Judge Swann, in General Sessions yesterday, denounced Miss Geraldine Wingate as a perjurer, after Miss Wingate had testified that she had wilfully made misstatements to Magistrate Krotel and after she had refused to answer many questions regarding her past on the ground that her answers might tend to incriminate and degrade her. After Judge Swann had said he knew of no legal way of reversing the decision of the lower court, and had asked Emil Fuchs, Raho's counsel, to submit a brief, Judge Swann said:

"If this had been a man who had committed such perjury I would have committed him at once to the City Prison for the action of the Grand Jury. The suffragette does not like to know how lightly the law rests on her. The offense in this case was absolutely unjustifiable, and was committed with malice aforethought. If this had been a man I would have committed him. If she was committed undoubtedly it would arouse the indignation of all of her sex. I understand, however, that Miss Wingate will be kept under restraint, and if she is not I will have her arrested for perjury."

In court yesterday, when a witness, Miss Wingate was told that she could refuse to answer any question on the ground that it would incriminate or degrade her.

"What is your real name?" asked Judge Swann.

"I refuse to answer," replied the witness.

"Do you refuse on the ground that it would incriminate or degrade you?" asked Mr. Fuchs.

"No, because I don't want to drag my family name into court," answered the witness.

"When you testified on May 3 in the Men's Night Court did you say that Ada Miller, whose real name is Anna Rosenberg, was of good character?" asked the Judge.

"Yes, something like that; I just can't remember."

"But did you not know that she had just been released from the Magdalene Home?" asked Mr. Fuchs.

"Yes, I had been told so, but I said what I did to protect her—that is all. I can't see what wrong I did."

Miss Wingate, when she was asked if she ever had been arrested on any charge, refused to answer, on the ground that her answer would tend to degrade her. Judge Swann then explained to the witness the reason of the hearing. He said that although she had caused the arrest of Raho on testimony which it developed was perjured, Raho had been sentenced, the Magistrate believing her.

"Oh, that has nothing to do with me, no matter what the Magistrate believed," said Miss Wingate.

Mr. Fuchs asked the witness if she hadn't written a play called "The Social Enemy." She acknowledged that she had.

"Well, didn't seven stenographers refuse to typewrite it because of its character?" asked Mr. Fuchs.

"I don't see what this has to do with the case at all," replied the witness.

"Didn't you sign the name of Ford to the play, and say you were Miss Wingate's secretary in order to get the play written?" asked Mr. Fuchs.

"I refuse to answer that question, and I am not going to make a fool out of myself for you."

"Didn't you start a magazine called The Historical Suffragette?" asked Judge Swann.

"Oh, no; it was the 'Hysterical Suffragette,'" replied the witness.

Raho, who has served twenty days of his sentence, will be released.

Waltham Convertible Bracelet Watches

The novelty of this Waltham idea consists not only in a better bracelet and a better watch but also in the ability of both the bracelet and the watch to be worn separately.

The watch can be detached and worn either as a sautoir or chatelaine, and the bracelet, merely by inserting the two extra links which accompany it, can be worn just as a bracelet.

We have the most complete line of Waltham Watches in New York and we may add that our line of silverware has equal range and class.

Does Your Insurance Broker Understand Rate-Making?

IN the early days of fire insurance, two rates only were known—one for buildings of brick construction, another for frame, and these rates applied regardless of occupancy. Today fire-insurance schedule-rating is a highly complex and specialized science, and many factors besides the nature of construction are considered.

Particularly is this true in the rating of manufacturing establishments, wherein various processes are carried on and large quantities of new material are kept in stock. Many schedules of this kind, as well as those for mercantile houses, are so intricate as to be unintelligible, except to the expert.

The average business man accepts insurance for large amounts, without satisfying himself that his broker has any expert knowledge of rate-making, or that he is qualified by experience and ability to analyze the risk and suggest changes that will bring about reductions in premiums.

Our organization has time and again demonstrated its ability in this direction.

If you have insurable property, you will be interested in our methods.

An abundance of references from large insurers will convince you of our ability to serve you.

CITY GAINS IN CASH AND LOWERS DEBT

Controller Redeems $27,000,000 Corporate Stock, Revenue Bonds, and Bills.

$8,500,000 IN SINKING FUNDS

From This $5,000,000 Outstanding Bonds or Stock Is to be Bought —Bonds Taken from Public.

The city's temporary debt was decreased last week by nearly $25,000,000 through the concurrent funding and liquidating processes now in progress as the result of the recent bond sale and the May tax payments. At the same time its cash, which is abnormally high for the time being, increased nearly $3,000,000, and now stands $58,580,898, as shown by the City Chamberlain's accounts.

The receipts from taxes last week were about $19,000,000, and the remainder of the money due in payment for the bonds issued the week before amounting to about $6,250,000, came in on Monday, the rest of the $45,000,000 having been paid the week before. Altogether the city has also received nearly $62,000 in premiums on the bonds.

These receipts, with the large balances on hand, permitted the Controller to redeem more than $12,000,000 of the maturing corporate stock notes, and nearly $15,000,000 of revenue bonds and bills.

Of these obligations paid off, about $10,000,000 was held by the sinking funds, which consequently received that amount of cash. Of this, $2,200,000 was reinvested in corporate stock notes and revenue bonds, this money passing back to the City Treasury, as shown in the table. This left the sinking funds with about $8,500,000 in cash, of which $5,000,000 is to be invested in corporate stock or bonds bought on tender from the public.

*Increase.

When the Controller announced the bond sale which was held on May 20 he also announced that this $5,000,000 of bonds would be bought. Some years ago it was the custom for the Sinking Fund Commissioners to bid for bonds when a sale was held, just as any other investor would. The practice of the present administration is to buy for the sinking funds either short-term obligations or portions of old bond issues, as this is considered a sounder policy from an amortization standpoint, bringing cash into the sinking funds from time to time instead of fifty years hence. In asking for tenders of bonds the Controller has, therefore, excluded the last issue. Under the existing law, bonds bought for the sinking funds cannot be canceled, but are held until maturity, drawing interest, of course. The holdings of the sinking funds, however, are deducted from the aggregate outstanding for purposes of calculating the debt limit.

The first tenders under this plan of buying bonds in the market were received on Monday of this week, amounting to about $2,000,000. Of these offers about $1,000,000 of bonds were accepted. Further tenders are to be received on Mondays and Thursdays for the next few weeks, or until $5,000,000 have been accepted. Any bonds rejected on one occasion may be tendered again on succeeding dates on the same or different terms. The point is that the Controller accepts the most favorable offers first, and, if it appears that he cannot obtain the entire amount desired without paying higher prices, the offers first rejected may come within the price necessary to pay.

One of the purposes of this plan is to hold up the market for city bonds, and that is the reason it was announced at the same time as the prospective sale. If the fact that the city is in the market for $5,000,000 of its earlier issues keeps up prices, the city benefits in bringing out its new issue. On the other hand, if it does not have that effect the city is enabled to buy bonds at low prices, thus investing to advantage the cash in the sinking funds.

The sinking funds hold about $8,000,000 more of temporary obligations, maturing between now and June 15, which will bring in to them that much additional cash. This, with their other balances, will be available for the purchase of new stock notes and revenue bonds as they are issued, putting the city in a very independent position for some time in respect to its borrowings. Notes and bonds sold to the sinking funds all bear interest at 3 per cent., the amortization basis of the funds. If the condition of the money market is such that the city can profitably borrow outside at a lower rate and leave the sinking fund cash on deposit with the banks, drawing 2 per cent. interest, it can do so. If money rates are high it can sell its obligations to the sinking funds on a 3 per cent. basis.

MOTION TO ACQUIT WOOD IS DENIED

Jury, Not Judge, Must Pass on Case of Mill Owner Accused of Dynamite Conspiracy.

NO TESTIMONY FOR WOOD

His Counsel Rests, and To-day Defense of Atteaux Will Be Opened —The Court's Impressions.

BOSTON, June 3.—The guilt or innocence of William M. Wood, President of the American Woolen Company, charged with conspiracy to "plant" dynamite on the premises of textile strikers at Lawrence, must be determined by a jury and without any direct evidence having been introduced by the defense.

Judge John C. Crosby, presiding at the trial of Wood, Frederick E. Atteaux, and Dennis J. Collins, late to-day overruled a motion by Henry F. Hurlburt, counsel for the mill man, that the jurors be instructed to return a verdict for his client.

"Juries," said Judge Crosby, "can only draw such inferences from facts as are fair. It seems to me that it is of importance to show the relations—business and otherwise—between Mr. Atteaux and Mr. Wood, as well as the relations between other co-conspirators.

"It is necessary for the Commonwealth to show something more than passive knowledge or acquiescence in the conspiracy, but it is not necessary to prove that the conspirators actually met together, though this might be inferred from the evidence.

"I have not been sitting here for part of three weeks without having some impressions. Some of the evidence offered here tends to show that the defendant, Wood, was interested, as the head of a great corporation, and also as one of the two largest individual stockholders in the corporations affected, in the settlement of this strike.

"There is evidence that might influence the jury to convict Atteaux. There is evidence of intimacy between Atteaux and Wood. There is evidence that Atteaux and Wood were together at Wood's Andover home the night before the discovery of the dynamite, when both were attending a conference of mill men to discuss the situation.

"There is evidence that the evening before the dynamite was found a passenger—resembling the defendant Atteaux, but not identified—took a taxicab in front of Wood's house and went to Franklin and Washington Streets. There is evidence that Breen saw Atteaux and received from him $505. There is evidence that might warrant the inference that half an hour before Breen and Atteaux met, Atteaux was at Wood's house.

"It seems to me that all the evidence presented warrants the submission of the case to the jury as to all the defendants."

The prosecution rested early in the afternoon, and Mr. Hurlburt immediately announced that he would rest his case. In asking that the jury be instructed to acquit he based his argument on the claim that in order to show Wood guilty of conspiracy it must be established that he had active participation in an unlawful agreement. He declared that it had not been shown that Wood took an active part in the alleged conspiracy.

District Attorney Pelletier opposed the motion on the ground that it was a well-established principle of law that conspiracy could be established by inference and by circumstantial evidence, and that it was not necessary to prove an express agreement.

Only two witnesses were heard to-day. Nothing new of importance was brought out. To-morrow Mr. Coakley will open his case in defense of Atteaux.

FOREIGN PRICES INFLATED.

Cost of Living There Worse Than Here, Says Charles A. Whelan.

Charles A. Whelan, who returned yesterday from Europe on the Kronprinzessin Cecilie, said that the cost of living in Europe was much higher than it was in the United States.

"In Italy," he said, "we had to pay 16 cents a pound for sugar for use on my yacht, and the stores purchased in Southampton, England, were much dearer than the price for similar articles in New York. The difference is that in Europe the workman simply exists and does without articles of food and clothing that the American workman looks upon as everyday necessities."

Mr. Whelan said that money rates were high all over Europe because people were holding on to their cash and would not invest in securities. The war in the Balkans had destroyed the Turkish tobacco crops and had raised the price 25 per cent, and the price of all cigarettes made from Turkish tobacco in the United States would have to be increased, he said. This includes the Egyptian cigarettes, because they are made from Turkish tobacco.

GARY EXPLAINS WHY RAILS ARE $28 A TON

Steel Corporation Fixed It, Wouldn't Raise It, and Competitors Had to Follow.

BROKE UP JACKSON POOLS

Learned of Them from a Stranger and Went After Them—Gary Dinners Given to Cultivate Rivals.

Elbert H. Gary, Chairman of the United States Steel Corporation, continuing yesterday his testimony in the suit for its dissolution, told how he learned through a stranger of the existence of the Jackson wire pools, of which the American Steel and Wire Company, a subsidiary, was a member. He denied that there had ever been, so far as he knew, an international rail pool, such as William Ellis Corey understood was in operation, and explained why the price of rails had not varied from $28 a ton in years. The Gary dinners, he said, had nothing to do with price-fixing.

He said when he heard of the Jackson pools he sent for Charles MacVeagh, General Solicitor of the Steel Corporation.

"I told Mr. MacVeagh," he said, "that I didn't think there was any foundation for the man's statement, that I was very much surprised by it, that I understood that anything that could possibly be questioned had been wiped out long ago, that I would like to have him go into this matter thoroughly with the stranger who came to my office, and if they found anything wrong to be certain that it was wiped out.

"Mr. MacVeagh reported that he had found the wire people connected with an arrangement he considered illegal. I told him to make sure that the whole matter was abandoned, and if he had any difficulty to report to me. At my direction the subsidiaries withdrew."

An extract from the minutes of the Finance Committee of the Steel Corporation, which had been read to Mr. Corey, was read yesterday to Judge Gary by R. V. Lindabury, counsel for the defense. The meeting was on Nov. 1, 1904, and the minutes said:

"The President brought up the question of making some arrangement with foreign producers in regard to the price of rails to be sold in neutral markets. After a full discussion, it was referred to Messrs. Gary and Corey with power."

"What do you say about that?" asked Mr. Lindabury.

"I say it was probably done to bury it," said Judge Gary. "The committee never took any action. If anybody suggested to me that an agreement could or ought to be had of any sort I know very well what my answer would be."

The Gary dinners and other meetings of steel manufacturers were gone into at length. The first Gary dinner was held in November, 1907, soon after the acute stage of the panic. Customers who had stocks of steel, Judge Gary said, feared the demoralization of the industry and manufacturers were uneasy.

The purpose of the Gary dinners, he said, was to bring together into friendly contact men engaged in the iron and steel industry. There was nothing like close contact with a competitor, he said, to assure fair and decent treatment.

"My purpose," said he, "was to prevent the demoralization of business, to maintain so far as practicable the stability of business, and to prevent it if I could not by agreement, but by exhortation—the wide and sudden fluctuation of prices, which would be injurious to every one interested in the business of iron and steel manufacture."

Two dinners with foreign manufacturers were held in 1908, a dinner under the auspices of the American Iron and Steel Institute in February, 1909, and a Gary dinner in January, 1911. The speeches made by Judge Gary at these dinners were put in evidence to show that there was no idea of fixing prices.

As to the price of steel rails, Judge Gary said the President of the Pennsylvania Railroad came to him each year to fix the price for the following year.

"The basic price of $28," he said, "has continued largely because the Steel Corporation refused to advance it. We have taken our position and the others have been obliged to follow, notwithstanding that the cost of manufacture has materially increased."

Judge Gary's direct examination was finished yesterday. He will be cross-examined after Percival Roberts, Jr., who wants to start for Europe, has testified. Mr. Roberts, who is the first witness to be called by both sides, took the stand for a few minutes before adjournment yesterday. He is a member of the Finance Committee and was formerly President of the American Bridge Company.

MORRIS PARK REALTY SALE.

266 More Lots Sold—Total is 1,011 Lots for $1,115,900.

Two hundred and sixty-six lots were sold yesterday at the auction sale of the Morris Park Racetrack property for a total of $277,635. The average price was $1,043. The total number of lots sold in the three days of the sale is 1,011, for a total of $1,115,900, at an average price of $1,103 a lot.

In the first hour of yesterday's sale thirty-three lots were sold at an average price of $971 a lot. The northeast corner of Pierce and Radcliff Avenues brought $1,425, while the adjoining lots on Pierce Avenue ranged from $900 to $1,000. Radcliff Avenue lots sold at from $875 to $1,175 each. The southeast corner of Van Nest and Radcliff Avenues was knocked down at $1,425. The three adjoining lots on Van Nest Avenue went for $1,075, $975, and $875, respectively.

There was some brisk bidding for lots in Block 70, just south of the Westchester & Boston Railroad Station. The majority of lots were irregular in size, and brought from $1,600 to $3,050. W. B. Bassett of Norfolk, Va., who was a heavy buyer in the first days of the sale, increased his holdings by the purchase of the entire block front on the south side of Pierce Avenue, between Haight and Lurting Avenues, a plot 200 by 150. He paid $1,100 each for the corners, and $700 each for the inside lots.

The fact that prices had fallen off was shown in the sale of the southeast corner of Morris Park Avenue and Home Avenue, which was knocked down for $2,650. The southwest corner brought $3,750 on Monday.

FRANKLIN BALANCED CONSTRUCTION OR SPECIALIZED FEATURES

Franklin Balanced Construction has succeeded in trimming down overweight in every part; in measuring the capacity of every part, and the strain on every part; and in correlating the size, weight and capacity to meet that unavoidable strain.

Franklin Little Six "30," a light, medium size 5-passenger car $2900

THOUSANDS of cars are sold by exploiting some particular feature—Speed — Engine — Transmission — Starting Device. The list runs the whole gamut of parts and accessories.

Franklin Balanced Construction plays up no feature at the expense of the whole machine. It has netted a saving of 1000 lbs. to 1200 lbs. weight per car compared with any other car of equal power and capacity.

Reduced weight increases tire mileage, as proved by Franklin users, 100% over all other cars of equal power and capacity. Reduced weight increases gasoline mileage for Franklin users 100% over all other cars of equal power and capacity.

The Franklin has reduced its weight like the fighter who trains down to the minute.

The Franklin laminated wood frame is a revelation. Abolishing the rigid steel frame has reduced the jolts to a minimum. The Franklin wood frame, plus four full elliptical springs, absorbs road shocks just as the wooden foundation of a heavy steam hammer saves the machine from being wrecked. All rigid strut rods and braces are eliminated.

Come in and let us explain the wonderful Fact-Backed Franklin to you detail by detail.

It is the most economical car in upkeep cost of its size and capacity.

GIANTS WIN IN ST. LOUIS---YANKEES AND SUPERBAS LOSE---DOG SHOW

GIANTS CLIMB INTO SECOND POSITION

Victory Over St. Louis and Brooklyn's Defeat Change National League Race.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, June 3.—The Giants vaulted serenely into second place in the dash for the National League flag to-day by extracting a 5 to 3 victory from the joyless combination which is now mobilized under the standard of Miller Huggins. Capt. Larry Doyle found the weather here too torrid, and lingered under the electric fans, while Shafer covered second base. The hot weather has affected Art Fletcher just the other way, and he celebrated with some dazzling assists and poked out three hits.

Tesreau pitched for seven innings and held the Cardinals to six hits, but he gave his teammates heart failure in the fifth when he forced in a run and conveyed the strong impression that he was going to explode with a loud roar. Jeff pulled himself together and climbed out of the hole. He left the game in the seventh inning to allow McCormick to try for a pinch hit, which was a futile effort. Crandall finished the game, allowing the Cards one hit in the ninth.

Neither Slim Sallee nor Burk were mystifying to the Giants, and except for fast fielding behind them the New Yorks would have harvested more runs. Chief Meyers was quite a busy man, and had more assists for his day's share than Merkle at first base. The Indian dropped several third strikes and had to toss the runners out at first, while he also nipped two ambitious base runners on their wild trips to second.

The Cards registered the first run in the opening session, when Huggins walked. The "Rabbit" stole second and went to third on Meyers's wild toss. He scored on Mowrey's single to left. Two runs put the Giants in the lead in the second. Snodgrass singled to right and counted when Merkle bounded a long double off the right field fence. Merkle went to third after Oakes caught Murray's fly. Meyers singled to left, scoring Merkle. The layout was still inviting, but Herzog tapped into a double play.

Another Giant run materialized in the fourth, when Snodgrass tripled to deep centre and went through on Merkle's sacrifice fly to Oakes. "Snod" beat the throw home comfortably. Meyers walked in the fifth, went down on Herzog's out, and scored on Burns's single to centre.

Danger lurked in the immediate vicinity of the Giants in the last half of the fifth. O'Leary and McLean greeted Tesreau with singles, and they landed on third and second after a poor throw-in by Burns. Steve Evans, batting for Sallee, rolled to Merkle, who threw O'Leary out at the plate, McLean going to third. Huggins walked and the bases were filled. Oakes filed to Burns, but the impatient Cards were all held at the corners. Sheckard waited patiently for a pass and forced McLean in with a run. The turmoil ended when Mowrey struck out.

In the eighth Shafer tripled and scored on Fletcher's single. In the ninth O'Leary solved Crandall in the Cards' dying effort. He smashed out a double and raced home at top speed while Whitted was being tossed out after an attempted hit-and-run play. Then Fletcher threw out the next three men in speedy succession.

The latest acquisition to the Giant ranks is Attorney Eddie Grant, one time of the Phillies, who has been purchased by Manager McGraw from Cincinnati, and will be used as a utility infielder. The score:

AMES SHUTS OUT BROOKLYN

Giants' Cast-Off Pitcher Holds Superbas to Three Hits.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, June 3.—Cincinnati won the first game of the series with Brooklyn here to-day, when Ames, the erstwhile New York twirler, allowed the visitors three hits and shut them out, 1 to 0. Allen also pitched good ball, allowing Cincinnati but three hits. A base on balls in the first inning, however, proved his undoing, as this was followed by two single, which permitted the only run of the game to come across the plate. Yingling pitched the final inning for Brooklyn.

Bescher's hitting was a factor, his hit in the first inning bringing in the only run. Kling faced Allen three times and drew as many bases on balls, one of which was given to him intentionally.

In the first inning Devore walked, Bates singled, and when Bescher followed with a single, Devore scored. The score:

Lynch Decides Against Brooklyn.

President Lynch of the National League of Professional Baseball Clubs yesterday issued the following statement and gave his decision in regard to the protested Brooklyn-Pittsburgh game of May 22, 1913, played at Brooklyn:

"This game was called by Umpire Klem on account of rain after five innings had been played and with the score 1 to 0 in favor of the visiting club. The Brooklyn Club protested the result on the ground that the umpire should have suspended play during the third or fourth innings. The evidence in the case shows that the umpire was clearly within his rights under Rule 74 of the Playing Rules. The protest is therefore disallowed and the game stands as played."

KEATING'S PITCHING SPOILED BY MATES

Should Have Won Game That Was Thrown Away by Poor Fielding.

For six innings at the Polo Grounds yesterday the Yankees threatened to give the fans a treat and win a home game after fourteen futile efforts in the same direction. In the seventh inning they went back to their old habits, and it did not take them long to force victory on the Cleveland Naps, making their first visit of the year to the Brush Stadium. An error in each of the three final chapters, coupled with loose playing which escapes the error column, helped the Naps to pile up seven runs in those closing stanzas and win easily by the score of 9 to 2.

A weird throw by Ed Sweeney, after the Yankee backstop had dropped a ball and spoiled an easy chance for a double play a minute earlier, started the Naps on their way to victory in the seventh inning. The bad throw came with the corners covered and two out, after Larry Lajoie, pinch hitting for "Silvers" Falkenberg, had passed up his fine opportunity with a pop fly to Zelder. In the eighth inning an error by Wolter in centre field let a single by Joe Jackson go for a circuit trip and chase two Naps across the plate in front of the slugging outfielder. One run could not have been checked, but the other two were made possible by Wolter's error. In the ninth Peckinpaugh joined the error-making party by fumbling an easy grounder from Carisch's bat, and Johnston followed with a lucky home run because the ball took an awkward bound past Wolter. The hit was worth only a single ordinarily.

Manager Chance again shook up his line-up in the hope of finding a winning combination, and for two-thirds of the route it appeared as if the first home victory was on its way. Borton and Zelder, the recent acquisitions from the White Sox camp, reported to Manager Chance yesterday morning, and both were put to work in the afternoon, Borton at first base and Zelder at second. Bert Daniels, with four strikeouts against him in the second game Monday, drew a bench assignment, and Roy Hartzell was sent out to right field. The three changes furnished no cause for complaint, but they could not offset the faulty work in other sections of the field.

Keating, who worked on the mound for the Yanks until Bert Daniels was sent in to start a rally in the eighth inning, deserved a better fate. With the same kind of support that the Naps frunished for his lanky opponent the Bridgeport boy would have held the pennant chasers to two runs in the eight innings that he worked. The eighth inning he held the Naps scoreless after they got runners on first and third bases with one out. In the sixth, with the bases full, he made King Larry pop up to the infield for the second out, and he would have handed the Naps another blank but for Sweeney's two misplays, one of which is not classed in the error column. The score:

ADDITIONS TO THE FREE LIST.

If the Democrats went to keep their promise of reducing the cost of living through downward revision, obviously they ought, where possible, to remove altogether the duties on articles of general consumption, notably on foodstuffs. The absolutely certain way to ease the burden of the tax is to remove it. Then in good seasons and in bad, with prices either high or low, the consumer cannot complain of the tax. Under the declared Democratic policy, what good reason is there for retaining the duties either on live animals or on meats, either on grains or on foods prepared from grains? None that we know of save the farmer vote. Senator CLAPP, the Minnesota Progressive, humbly confessed to the Lobby Investigation Committee that he owned a farm, and that his farming interests would be affected by tariff revision; also that he had spoken against Canadian reciprocity and in favor of protective duties on farm products. The Democrats may care very little about Senator CLAPP's vote, but they evidently care a great deal about the farmer vote throughout the country. But why discriminate? They have turned a very deaf ear to the loud outcries of the Louisiana Senators protesting in behalf of their sugarcane-growing constituents against free sugar; they have seemed to resent the appeal of the beet-sugar men protesting that free sugar would be their ruin. They pay no heed to the protests of the wool growers against free wool. Then why let the cattle-growing and grain-raising agricultural interests write the schedule of duties upon their own products?

Equality of treatment in this matter would be simple justice to the producers, and free foodstuffs would be a boon to the consumer. Plainly, the retention of a duty upon cattle, oats, and wheat, while meats, oatmeal, and flour are on the free list, is inconsistent. The Sub-Committee of the Senate Committee on Finance has favored a 10 per cent. duty upon beef, mutton, and pork, a specific rate of 45 cents per barrel on flour, 10 per cent. ad valorem upon other wheat products, 6 cents a bushel on oats, and 10 cents a bushel on wheat. Senator SIMMONS, Chairman of the Finance Committee, after a conference with President WILSON, has become a convert to the policy of free foodstuffs. It will be his endeavor to have the bill ready for the consideration of the Democratic caucus next week, with cattle, wheat, meats, and flour on the free list. This would not only be in harmony with the general Democratic policy of making a tariff bill that will, so far as possible, bring down the cost of living, but it is a sound National policy. A little study of the estimates of the Department of Agriculture, showing the rather disquieting decrease in the number of cattle, hogs, calves, and sheep raised and brought to market, ought to satisfy Congress that it is time to take measures for replenishing from abroad our diminishing domestic supply of meats and animal products.

In the last six years the number of beef cattle has fallen from 51,000,000 to 36,000,000; there was a diminution of 13 per cent. in the number of animals killed under Government inspection in the first three months of this year as compared with the same period in 1912. Live stock prices in the Chicago market reflect this decrease in supply. Our exports of live animals and animal products have fallen proportionately in recent years. There could be no better proof of the wisdom of removing altogether the duty on live animals and meats than is afforded by the fact that last year for the first time our imports of animals and animal products exceeded in value our exports. We are importing meats where we used to export them because the domestic supply is no longer equal to the demand. Manifestly, a duty upon such products is not only a direct burden upon the consumer, but it is harmful in the sense that it puts new demands upon our already overburdened industry of raising beef, cattle, and hogs. One of the strongest arguments for the removal of the duty upon wood pulp and print paper was the fact that our own forests were being depleted, and it was necessary to avail ourselves of the almost boundless forest resources of Canada. High prices, and they are continually going higher, are an almost irresistible temptation to the breeder to rush to market half-grown animals, breeding animals, and thus to make too heavy a drain upon the flocks and herds. The raising of meat-producing animals as the industry was carried on years ago upon enormous ranches is no longer possible. Grazing lands have been cut up into farms, just as wool growing, which was formerly profitable in New England and in Ohio, has been driven by the increased density of population and by the larger returns of general farming to its present refuge in the great mountain States and in Texas. The removal of the duty on wool has become imperative because of the needs of manufacturers for free raw material. The same argument supports convincingly the proposed removal altogether of the duties on live animals and meats. And the extension of the free list to include what the people eat is the surest way to satisfy them that the Democrats intend to keep their promise. The enlargement of the free list now favored by Senator SIMMONS is a matter of principle and sound policy. Only a calculating and timid expediency would let consideration of the farmer vote stand in its way.

THE SCHOOL BILLS VETOED.

Gov. SULZER can hardly be too much commended for his vetoing of all the McKee bills, designed to take the administration of the New York City schools out of the hands of their Superintendents, trained and responsible men, and to lodge it with the unwieldy Board of Education, which has already proved signally ill fitted to discharge its present duties. By a stroke of his pen the Governor has undone the bad work of the Legislature and of Mayor GAYNOR in approving these bills.

The report of the Hanus Investigating Committee has demonstrated the unfitness of the Board of Education, as at present constituted. It has shown, too, the urgent need of reforming the school management and curriculum. But the reforms needed could never be furthered by depriving the rightful and responsible heads of the system of their powers.

THE CURRAN REPORT.

The report of the Curran Committee, so far as it has been made public, contains no fact, no specific charge, that would justify the removal of Police Commissioner WALDO at the beginning of a municipal campaign. We do not believe that a substitute could be found more competent, if nearly as competent as Mr. WALDO to take up the onerous duties and the inevitable burden of abuse for a short time, with the probability that he would not hold his position after next January. A pertinent comment on the result of the protracted Aldermanic investigation of the Police Department is that instead of helping to remove that unhappy branch of the City Government from political thralldom it tends to complicate it further with political manoeuvres.

The twelve charges preferred against the Commissioner in that portion of the report to the Board of Aldermen published yesterday enumerate as many defects in the management of the police, according to the majority of the committee's views. One of them relates to his alleged refusal to assist the investigators, and this is denied by both Mr. WALDO and the Mayor. The charges do not reflect on Mr. WALDO's honesty of purpose or his personal integrity. The inefficiency at Police Headquarters is largely due, as the citizens of New York know, to the conditions governing the appointment of Commissioners, and the always dubious relations consequently existing between the head of the force and his subordinates. The Commissioner holds office only at the pleasure of the Mayor who appoints him. The men he has to deal with hold their places, on good behavior, until they reach the age of retirement. In the circumstances, no Commissioner has ever been able to exert the full measure of authority that should belong to the office. Commissioners come and go, the force goes on forever.

Without the slightest idea of belittling the good work of the District Attorney in unearthing corruption in the Police Department or bringing offenders to justice, it must be said that no sufficient reason has been given for any present change in the Commissionership. Nothing could be gained for the force or the city by the appointment of a temporary successor to Mr. WALDO at this time. The four Aldermen who have signed the report call the Commissioner "incompetent" and unfit to perform the duties of "his office." They seem to have reached no conclusion as to a needed change in the status of the Commissioner, so that his authority may be increased and strengthened, and his hold on the office be made more secure. The removal of Mr. WALDO would compel a new appointment by the Mayor, who has frequently expressed satisfaction with Mr. WALDO, and would, we infer, be unable to choose for the office another man whom he would think better fitted to perform its duties.

The charges are nearly all of a technical character, treating of matters of which the public at large is quite incompetent to judge. To the ordinary mind most of them will seem trivial. They do not indicate that any discovery has been made of dishonesty or self-seeking on the part of Mr. WALDO. It is said that the report will be "held up" for a fortnight at least, a fortnight in which the politicians will be eager and active. It is a pity. Judging from the first part of its report the city will gain no benefit from the labors of the Curran Committee.

WESTON THE WALKER.

That "an old hoss kin run" was vouched for in stirring verse by OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES, who was himself a wiry and spry old fellow, like EDWARD PAYSON WESTON. Weston the walker is well started on another little cross-country jaunt of 1,446 miles to lay the cornerstone of the Minneapolis Athletic Club's new building. His ocean-to-ocean walk in 1910, at the age of 72, was something of an undertaking, he admits; but the trip on which President FINLEY of the City College bade him godspeed on Tuesday is intended merely as a breather. Dr. FINLEY must care for his college, Mayor GAYNOR is tied to the City Hall, and Mr. ROOSEVELT, who at 25 wrote a book on the joys of walking trips, has been busy of late with politics and litigation. The world is too much with us, getting and spending, but WESTON walks.

"Walking is equivalent to sleep," he says; for it is the "most healthful thing you can do." It earns healthful sleep, a good digestion, and a limber old age. WESTON began to feel rheumatic twinges some fifteen years ago, so he resumed his walking "stunts" and thereafter defied all infirmities. He has still the advantages of youth and the green out-of-doors.

THE STATE'S DEBT AND CREDIT.

In 1893 the total debt of New York State was $680, and in 1906 it had risen to $10,630,660. That was a mere nothing for eight millions of people, with eight billions of property subject to taxation, and no direct tax. Now the State has something over nine millions of population, a valuation of eleven billions, a direct State tax of $11,922,985, and a debt of $109,702,660, to say nothing of obligations authorized but unissued for $124,778,000. When the roads and canals are built the State will be mortgaged for a quarter of a billion dollars, and no manoeuvres with the sinking funds will avail to bring back the happy times when the State collected no direct taxes for years together, and had $13,678,138 in the bank, as in 1907. In the last ten years the population has increased about one-quarter. The amount spent on public works has increased 470 per cent. Increases of twice and thrice the increase of population are too numerous to specify. Thrift and economy are lost arts. Nobody takes any interest in them. No Governor, no party, practices them, or could hope to be kept in office if they did. It was an outrage when Gov. ODELL'S administration spent $23,600,000. Gov. HUGHES spent $29,300,000. Gov. DIX'S last budget was $52,000,000. Gov. SULZER pointed with scorn to that parsimony, and himself starts with $56,000,000.

New York is merely a shining example of a universal tendency. At a time when railways could not sell bonds the public bond market was never better. According to The Financial Chronicle's tabulation, the largest issue of public bonds—city, county, State—in any normal year up to 1905 was $201,743,346 in that year. The smallest issue for the last five years was $313,797,548 in 1908, and the total was $1,754,000,000. Concurrently there has gone on a corresponding change in the price paid for this almost incomprehensible borrowing. In 1906 63 per cent. of the issues were at 4 per cent. In 1912 only 26 per cent. were at that rate. In 1912 the proportion issued at 4½ per cent. was triple that of 1905. In 1912 no smaller a proportion than 17 per cent. was issued at 5 per cent., and that is the rate which it is now proposed to pay to sell the premier public issue in the United States, the National obligations alone excepted because they stand in a class by themselves and do not represent pure credit. On Thursday, it is said, with no surplusage of information, the Controller will accept offers for $27,000,000 of notes issued in anticipation of bonds. As an inducement to accept 5 per cent. for eight months, it is said that the notes will be exchangeable for State 4½s when issued, as they must be.

It would seem that the State has no alternative, at least for considerable amounts. Contracts have been made, and the sacrifice by postponing their fulfillment would be excessive. Nevertheless, every calculation under which this quarter of a billion of indebtedness was assumed is vitiated by the alteration in the money market. At 4 per cent. the interest charge for fifty years is double the borrowing. At 4½ per cent. it is 225 per cent. of the principal. Not even New York State can afford to ignore this consideration when dealing with scores and hundreds of millions. Nor is the State alone concerned. When the State borrows at 4½ per cent. it takes precedence of the city. When the city pays 4½ per cent. railways pay more, and private borrowers, perhaps, can get less than they need.

Such lavish public borrowing as this is best done at times of prostration, when there is little private credit, and public expenditures are necessary to put life into stagnant industry. When the public resources are squandered in overbidding private credit there is a waste of the taxing power in a double sense. More is paid than need be with more prudent financing, and the power to equalize periods of financial stress is lost. So far as the situation has the capacity of being reconsidered, it should be, with these thoughts in mind.

UNTAXING BUILDINGS.

A coterie of reformers is proposing that the tax rate on buildings shall be reduced and transferred to land because "manufacturers in New York City have to pay higher prices for their factories because buildings are taxed at the same rate as land." It may be so as matter of fact, but not for the reasons given, and there is a speedier and surer remedy.

Nobody is under compulsion to pay rent in New York. The only reason for paying rent anywhere is that on the whole it is more to the advantage of the rentpayer than not paying rent, with all that non-payment implies. If the rents in New York are high it is because the advantages connected with paying rent here are greater than relief from the rents by moving. If the rents are higher than the profits made by paying them, the rents will fall without any reform of taxation, New York is now passing through a period of real estate depression, which the Mayor says will last years. If rents are too high in some sections of New York, they are too low in other sections. There are in progress shifts of population and business and readjustments of values and rents great enough to enable all to suit their idea of what they ought to pay, if they are willing to pay anything. It can hardly be called a reform which increases the oversupply of buildings at such a time.

No general tax change can affect values due to specific considerations. If any man of business thinks that the use of any selected location for his shop or residence or factory will give him what he wants he is going to bid for it what he thinks he can afford to pay, regardless of the rate of tax on building or on land. It is only the total of the tax which counts. If the total is not changed there will be no effect on rents. The city cannot stand a reduction in the tax total, and an increase would be equally a hardship upon the renters. Rest and recuperation are what the case calls for, rather than agitation.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Is Prison Society Improving?

Just how many prisons are showing the effects of having prisoners of a higher class than formerly, and how far the effects have gone, are questions hardly to be settled from observations made by JULIAN HAWTHORNE in the course of his brief detention. Of course he has observed intelligently and is thoroughly competent to describe what he has seen, but it is possible to doubt the accuracy of his assumption that either the moral or the intellectual average of prison populations is higher now than ever before.

One does not have to dig into history very deeply to reach times when really and highly estimable persons were much more likely to find themselves behind bars than now, and it is not probable that those guilty of the new crimes growing out of changed commercial conditions are as different from the insensitive "thugs" referred to by this student of the subject as were the variously eminent persons—patriots, statesmen, philosophers, and scientists—who made themselves in one way or another troublesome or offensive to the powers of State or Church in the days when prison evils and abuses were at their very worst. Such changes for the better in the treatment of prisoners as have been accomplished did not begin until long after the habit of shutting such people up had been abandoned to greater or less extent, and the reforms were probably contemporaneous, not with an elevation, but with a lowering, of the social level in these institutions.

If the reports of Gov. SULZER'S Commissioner are to be trusted even in part, our own prisons are still decidedly dreadful places, where men are deprived of health and mind as well as of liberty. Doubtless many of the old tortures are now rare or unknown, but this seems to be due rather to a general social advance than to the influence to which HAWTHORNE credits it. His own case is exceptional, and so is that of the Atlanta Penitentiary, if it be true that he has found there, as he implies, "many persons of good education, gentle breeding, and high intelligence."

If lawmakers have "new-born scruples," and public prosecutors make "subtle discriminations," at least they no longer see punishable crimes in political and religious heterodoxy, and society more and more tends to take upon its own shoulders responsibility for the faults of its constituent members. It is from this that the "thugs" are profiting, not from a special disinclination to be severe with any because it would be excessive for some.

Inexplicable, Therefore Improbable.

No belief is more firmly fixed in the public mind than the one that gypsies steal and carry away the children of other people. For this, as for every other widespread conviction, there must be some basis of truth, and yet it is hard to see why such kidnappings should ever have been what could be called a specialty of these wanderers. Not only are they usually well supplied with children of their own, but they have no particular use, and certainly no particular liking, for those of alien blood, and of all crimes this is the one that would be most nearly sure to get them into serious trouble.

Yet the apprehension lingers, and only this week, over near Philadelphia, intense excitement was created by a report that a band of gypsies had stolen THOMAS KELLY, an infant of three, and were hastening away with him toward New York as fast as their horses could travel. That the child did disappear for a while after the gypsies passed seems to be true, but the rumor that he went in a gypsy wagon is supported by only the poorest of evidence, and the fact that little THOMAS soon reappeared at home indicates that his straying had been neither far nor assisted.

Judging from their appearance, few of the so-called gypsies in the United States have much, if any, of the mysterious blood of their ancient race in their veins. They are of many types, showing innumerable crossings with the various peoples among whom they have lived, and their love for camp life is no longer as much of a distinction as it used to be. For no very definite reasons they have a bad name, but not much worse than that of other folk who make a business of dealing in that theoretically noble, but curiously demoralizing, beast, the horse. They do not get into jail very often, and they show a disposition toward, and ability for, self-support that is lacking in the great fraternity of tramps. Their fortune-telling pretensions are no longer taken with any seriousness by anybody except the densely ignorant and the members of the British aristocracy.

That they steal children, or ever did, is probably a wild generalization from a few isolated cases for which there was some special reason of revenge or interest.

Co-operation Works In England.

In the enormous transactions and steady growth of the British organizations engaged in co-operative trading there is constant reason for wondering why this device, so successful among our cousins, is hardly ever attempted here, and in the few instances when tried it moves swiftly to apparently inevitable failure.

We are eager enough to cut down living expenses, and the possibility—for others—of doing it by combinations of buyers to get wholesale prices has been demonstrated for many years, but somehow the process does not appeal to American instincts.

The so-called Friendly Societies in the United Kingdom did in the last twelve months covered by the reports of their Chief Register a business amounting to almost $350,000,000 for their almost 3,000,000 members, and as many associates in other co-operative bodies had accounts aggregating nearly as much again. Of course it cannot be said that a general level of prosperity higher than our own has been thus effected, but it is at least probable that co-operation in England prevents a worse state of affairs than exists, and this must be realized, else would not more and more people constantly join in the movement?

Here it is almost impossible to get two or three neighbors in a suburb to divide a carload of coal, and we seem to prefer the regulation to the elimination of the middleman about whose sins and extortions we are always complaining so bitterly.

A POST OFFICE ANOMALY.

Dr. MacCracken Discovers Nice Rules for Mailing Invitations.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The niceties of the administration of the parcel post law by the Post Office Department have mystified many citizens, but the most extraordinary decision of all has just come to light with respect to the commencement invitations of the New York University graduates.

It has been the custom of the university registrar for some years to mail to each candidate the engraved invitations, envelopes, and printed admission cards allotted to him in connection with commencement events, in order that he might send them to his friends. Upon inquiry at the Post Office the university was advised that as printed matter these packages could not be mailed under the parcel post law. They were then mailed as third-class printed matter, and, after being held for some days at the Post Office, doubtless to permit full discussion of so nice a point, they were returned to the university as unmailable as third-class matter, because the envelopes accompanying the invitations were merchandise and must, therefore, be mailed under the parcel post law.

The university was further advised that if the invitations had been folded and placed in the envelopes, instead of being laid side by side, the envelopes would have been accepted as "containers of printed matter," and allowed to continue to their destination as third-class matter.

Those of our six hundred graduates who have been deprived of their commencement invitations for Wednesday will doubtless wonder whether our postal facilities are really increased by the administration of the new law.

"HOLD-UP" OF CONTAINERS.

"Egg Trust" Suspected of Cornering All the Crates.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Is the hand of the "Egg Trust" in this? Last year I bought four crates of eggs from a farmer in Vermont to put down in silicate of soda, for Winter use. This year the same man offered me eggs at the same price as last year and he received my order, to be delivered this month. To-day he writes me that eggs are crowding in on him, but he cannot get delivery of any crates to ship them in, though they were ordered and promised six weeks ago.

I find also similar conditions prevailing in a part of Steuben County, New York. I understand numbers of persons put eggs in silicate of soda last year, and it is highly probable the "Trust" found itself handicapped, for you know good eggs sold much cheaper the past Winter than the corresponding time the previous year. Algrette Dealers Not Involved.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In his letter to THE TIMES, the reference made by Dr. William T. Hornaday to "the group of dealers in algrettes, which have been called the 'White Badges of Cruelty,'" obviously intended to prejudice the trade at large in this matter, is totally unjustified. We are neither appearing for dealers in algrettes nor, as Mr. Hornaday knows, is there any dealer in algrettes himself appearing in opposition to the bill.

Secondly, Mr. Hornaday seems put out at our refusal to accept certain chapters of the book entitled "Our Vanishing Wild Life," in lieu of a "scientific or legislative inquiry of the subject." For some reason Mr. Hornaday fails to make known that he is the author of this book and that the brief submitted to the Ways and Means Committee consisted largely, if not entirely, of the chapters referred to. The importers of plumage had no intimation that a hearing was being had before the Ways and Means Committee, and consequently had no representative present to answer the one-sided statements of Mr. Hornaday and his associate.

CARNEGIE MILLIONS IN MEDICAL CRUSADE

Foundation Not Trying to Crush Sectarianism in Colleges, Dr. Pritchett Says.

WARS ON UNFIT SCHOOLS

His Annual Report Says the Maintenance of Defective Institutions Is a Blow at Public Health.

That it is not the policy of the Carnegie Foundation, with its fund of $140,000,000 for educational purposes, to crush sectarianism in colleges which cherish denominational tendencies is the emphatic averment of Dr. Henry S. Pritchett, head of the Foundation. Dr. Pritchett took occasion yesterday to make this point clear, in view of a renewal of reports, following the announcement last week of Mr. Carnegie's gift of $1,000,000 to the medical school of Vanderbilt University that the ironmaster is hostile to sectarian institutions.

Dr. Pritchett made it known, however, that the tremendous resources of the Foundation would be used to whatever extent was necessary in a crusade against the worthless medical schools throughout the country that trade on the names of worthy institutions under whose charters they take refuge. Why such institutions permit this may be made the subject of an investigation. The investigation would be based on the premise that men in an official capacity in the colleges concerned reap large profits from the commercialized medical schools.

The most recent reports having to do with the charge of sectarianism attended the announcement of the $1,000,000 gift to Vanderbilt University in Nashville, Tenn., to be used exclusively for its medical school. Another medical school was started in Nashville several months ago by the University of the South at Sewanee, Tenn., and financial aid was sought from the Carnegie Foundation. Sewanee is an Episcopal institution and Vanderbilt is Methodist. Dr. Pritchett wrote to Vice Chancellor Hall of Sewanee on last Jan. 27, in part, as follows:

> I look upon Sewanee as one of the finest colleges in the country, a college which has perhaps done more to create wholesome educational ideals than almost any other college in the South. I feel equally sure that you could do nothing more surely calculated to impair the standing or to muddy the educational waters in your part of the country than to embark upon the establishment of a medical school in Nashville. After great tribulation the status of medical education in Nashville has been brought to a promising condition by the union of the three medical colleges formerly there into one under the direction of Vanderbilt University. One medical school in the whole of Tennessee will be ample to educate in the right way all the physicians (and many more) that Tennessee or the region needs. It is going to be difficult enough to obtain the necessary support to plan even one school upon a modern basis. * * *
> I inclose as bearing on this matter advance proof sheets of my forthcoming report, and under another cover I am forwarding a copy of a report on medical education issued two years ago by the Foundation. I beg, Mr. Vice Chancellor, that you will regard this somewhat long communication as prompted solely by concern for the college, and for what seems to be the true interest of medical education.

The alumni of Sewanee assisted in promoting the medical school project, among them Dr. John H. P. Hodgson of 29 Washington Square. He called at the offices of the General Education Board maintained by John D. Rockefeller, and conferred with its head, Abraham Flexner.

"While we were discussing the subject," Dr. Hodgson said last night, "Mr. Flexner informed me that the General Education Board was opposed to our project, and expressed the opinion that the school could not obtain a commendable rating from the American Medical Association. I take exception to this attitude of the General Education Board, which indicates a disposition to dominate educational affairs in this country. This is not a personal matter with me. I view the situation solely as a danger in economics. Sewanee will establish a medical school, and if it does not prove successful according to high standards, I am sure the university will not continue it."

Mr. Flexner was not in his offices at 17 Battery Place, yesterday afternoon, but the Secretary of the board, Dr. Wallace Butterick, said he recalled Dr. Hodgson's visit when there was an informal discussion of the subject.

"The General Education Board has nothing to do with the rating of medical schools," Dr. Butterick said, "and has never made an appropriation to a medical school. The matter concerning Sewanee University has never been presented to us officially."

Comparing American medical schools with those abroad, Dr. Pritchett's report says:

> "American schools range from the highest to the lowest conception of medical education and medical ideals. Side by side with schools of the best modern type stand other schools whose function is to get the ill-trained and the unfit into medical practice by the shortest route which the varying laws of our States will permit. * * *
> "This situation forms the most striking contrast between medical conditions in America and in Europe. To remedy this condition we need, first of all, the education of public opinion to the difference between medicine as a business and medicine as a profession. The public needs * * * to learn that the maintenance of commercial and defective agencies for the training of physicians is a blow at public health and a betrayal of public interest; that a society can obtain a full supply of men for the medical profession who are educated, well trained, and devoted to a high professional ideal.
> "In America alone does one find a college or university lending the shelter of its name and its character to a medical school which it neither controls nor supports. Examples of this sort of relation are so widespread that instances will at once occur to any one familiar with the situation. * * * What are the reasons which impel colleges—sometimes old and well-known institutions—to maintain so singular a relation? This question would not be a simple one to answer. Many factors enter into the situation—institutional ambition, desire for power or for numbers, social influence—nearly every motive except an intelligent desire to serve the cause of medical education."

WILSON CANNOT ATTEND.

President Unable to Witness 10,000 Boys Perform in Central Park.

President Wilson will not attend the demonstration by 10,000 boys in Central Park on Friday. An invitation was extended to him by Gustave T. Kirby in person. The President has sent this letter to the Public Schools Athletic League through Gen. George W. Wingate:

White House,
Washington, D. C., May 29, 1913.

My Dear Gen. Wingate:

I have received your letter of May 26, and thank you warmly for the cordial invitation which you extend to me on behalf of the Public Schools Athletic League of the City of New York. I deeply appreciate your courtesy, and am indeed sorry that I am unable to accept, in order that I may devote my full energies to my duties. I am denying myself the pleasure of accepting any invitations to attend public functions during the first year of my Administration.

Please accept my very best wishes for a continuance of the effective work which is being accomplished by your league. Sincerely yours, WOODROW WILSON.

The committee had hoped that the President would not class the athletic meet with a public function.

HONOR GORGAS AND CARREL.

Columbia to Give Them Honorary Degrees To-day.

Columbia University will celebrate today its 159th Commencement Day. A long and elaborate programme has been arranged.

Eight honorary degrees will be awarded. The degree of Doctor of Science will be conferred upon Col. William Crawford Gorgas, Assistant Surgeon General of the United States Army Medical Corps, and Dr. Alexis Carrel of the Rockefeller Institute of Medical Research.

Daniel Chester French, the sculptor, and Barrett Wendell, Professor of English at Harvard University, will receive the honorary degree of Doctor of Letters. George Sutherland, United States Senator from Utah, has been selected by Columbia to be the recipient of the degree of Doctor of Laws. The honorary degree of Master of Arts will be conferred upon Henry Sydnor Harrison and William Rhinelander Stewart, both graduates of the University.

The Rev. Samuel Parkes Cadman has been singled out as the only recipient of the honorary degree of Doctor of Sacred Theology. All of the recipients of these degrees will march in the academic procession to the university gymnasium.

This procession will form in the library. One of its features will be the presence of some twelve members of the Class of '63, whose semi-centennial anniversary will be celebrated tomorrow. The recipients of the honorary degrees will bring up the rear of the procession, preceding President Butler.

Following the ceremonies in the gymnasium the alumni luncheon will be held. At this the President will speak, and the recipients of the honorary degrees will make short addresses.

The afternoon will be devoted to the alumni and their reunion celebrations. The first gala event will be the costume parade, in which classes all the way down from that of '63 will appear in all manner of costumes, each anxious to win the prize awarded for the best and most original costume, and the "stunt" that the class does while in these costumes. Immediately following this event, which will be held on South Field, the alumni will adjourn to the baseball game between the Varsity and the University of Pennsylvania.

A large dinner, termed for the first time this year "The Reune," will furnish the alumni with another chance to revive their undergraduate feelings, and then vaudeville by talent of their own classes and the singing of college songs on the library steps will wind up the day.

Last night was devoted to the undergraduates. They held for the first time a "Campus Night" celebration, which was solely for the seniors and undergraduates, and to which the alumni were not invited. An organ recital in St. Paul's Chapel opened the programme, and this was followed by a reception by the President and members of the Faculty in Philosophy Hall. The evening closed with the band concert in the grove.

The campus was fenced off, a new feature of the campus events, and guests with tickets only were able to enter. The entire evening proved extremely successful, and there is little doubt but that "Campus Night" will become a permanent feature of Commencement Week celebrations.

In succession to Assistant Professor Pigott, who resigned to enter the services of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company, George B. Preston, M. E., Cornell, 1888, was appointed yesterday Assistant Professor of Steam Engineering at Columbia.

J. E. Zanetti, Ph.D., formerly Instructor in chemistry, who resigned some time ago to accept a position as Director of the Institute of Chemistry at Montevideo, Uruguay, was appointed Assistant Professor in Chemistry to fill a vacancy in the teaching staff. Prof. Zanetti will be placed in charge of the Qualitative Laboratory.

DEGREE FOR WHITMAN.

Will Become Doctor of Laws at New York University Commencement.

The senior class of New York University held its class day exercises yesterday afternoon on the lawn of Battery Hill. William H. Hamilton, Jr., President of the class, delivered an address, the class history was read by C. Wesley Ripperger, and Victor M. Shapiro followed with the prophecy. The class oration by Finley M. Foster and the poem by Frank Dean Gifford were next, and led to the class statistics, which were read by James H. McManus.

THE TIMES was selected by a vote greater than that of all the other newspapers combined as the most popular newspaper in New York City. Following the presentation of the "Bun," the scene was shifted to the east front of Gould Hall, where the Last Will and Testament of the class was read by Harold W. Rudolph, and Walter L. Hall planted the class ivy.

The commencement exercises will begin in the auditorium at 10:30 o'clock this morning. William R. Wilcox, former head of the Public Service Commission, will address the graduates of the schools at the Heights, and in the afternoon Chancellor Brown will deliver the address to the 600 graduates of the downtown schools.

District Attorney Whitman, a graduate of the University Law School in 1894; Carlos Maria de Pena, Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the Republic of Uruguay to the United States; St. Clair McKelway, Chancellor of the University of the State of New York; Calvin Noyes Kendall, Commissioner of Education of the State of New Jersey, and Arthur Von Briesen, a graduate of the University Law School in 1868, and President of the Legal Aid Society, will receive the degree of Doctor of Laws this afternoon.

GIVE UP STEPS AT BARNARD.

The Seniors Surrender Their Rights with Songs and Dances.

The class of 1913, Barnard College, left their steps on Milbank quadrangle yesterday and gave them over to the incoming senior class. Before giving up their steps the senior class sang all their songs from freshman year up, ending with the senior class song.

There's a college on the hilltop
That's very dear to me,
And a certain group of students
High with comradry;
So we'll sing to dear old Barnard,
And loyal be and true.
As we show to coming classes
How we loved the white and blue.

The odd-fellows banner was then presented by Gertrude Morris, Senior President, to Freda Kirchwey, incoming Junior President.

Imogene Ireland then delivered the steps oration and the class passed over to the campus, where they gave a pageant. First Priscilla Lockwood delivered the ivy oration. She said in part:

"We talk of ourselves all during senior week so to-day let us talk of the Ivy. This really is an obituary notice, for this is the last year that Ivy Day is to be held."

Then followed the pageant illustrating Greek games and dancing followed by May-pole and ivy dancing.

MT. ST. VINCENT GRADUATES

First Class of the New College Gets Diplomas from Cardinal Farley.

Mount St. Vincent, the girls' academy which has been enlarged by charter of the State to a college, bestowed its first college degrees yesterday. The commencement exercises began last Saturday afternoon and will culminate tomorrow in ceremonies which include the junior luncheon to the seniors. On last Sunday the Baccalaureate sermon was preached by the Rev. Thomas J. McCluskey, S. J., and on Monday the "Antigone of Sophocles" was given on the campus by the dramatic society of the college.

Those receiving degrees yesterday were the Misses Marie Madeleine Lefebvre, Lauretta J. Reynaud, Sara J. Dougherty, Helen A. Kelly, and Miss Frances R. Moore. Cardinal Farley conferred the degrees and made a twenty-minute address, in which he referred to the founding of the academy on land which is now included in Central Park. He also spoke of the splendid work of the Sisters of Charity being done in the New York parochial schools in which 90,000 children are being educated.

Three hundred guests, including the clergy, were present, among them Lieut. Gov. Martin H. Glynn, who made an address to the graduating class. Prof. Jarvis Kelley led the academic procession.

SURPLUS IS REAL, SAYS HITCHCOCK

Treasury Department Figured It, Asserts Former Postal Chief in a Sharp Answer to Critics.

CITES REPORT TO HOUSE

And Suggests New Officials Might Better Be Handling the Big Business Left to Them.

SILVER CITY, New Mexico, June 3.—Frank H. Hitchcock, ex-Postmaster General, arrived here to-day from the Mogollon Mountains, and saw for the first time the statement issued a few days ago by Postmaster General Burleson attacking his administration of the department. After reading the charges, Mr. Hitchcock issued a statement, saying:

"A committee composed in the main of newly appointed assistants, having less than three months' experience, attempts in a report to the present head of the department to discredit the financial showing made by the postal service under Taft's Administration. After reporting alleged discrepancies that are insignificant, when compared with the great sums known to have been saved by their predecessors, this committee of novitiates proceeds to enlighten the American people as to the character of the postal service.

"Their statement is as inaccurate as it is gratuitous, for the public well knows that never was the Postal Service conducted more efficiently or mail handled with greater precision and dispatch than in the closing years of the Taft Administration. During that Administration nearly 5,000 new post offices were established, delivery by letter carrier was provided in about 300 additional cities, and over 3,000 new rural routes, aggregating about 75,000 miles, were authorized.

"Notwithstanding these great extensions of service and the heavy increase in expenditures they required, the Post Office Department was placed on a self-sustaining basis, and that was its condition when, on the 4th of March, it passed into the hands of the newly appointed officers.

"The Postal Committee of the Democratic House of Congress endeavored last year in a similar manner to attack the audited accounts of the postal service, but, after investigation, that committee was fair enough to admit that the department had become substantially self-sustaining.

Says Treasury Figured Surplus.

"The returns as to surplus or deficit are made up, not by the Post Office Department, but by the Treasury Department, where all postal income is received and all postal accounts finally audited. The Secretary of the Treasury reported the wiping out of the postal deficit, and the record thus certified to in his fiscal report is likely to stand in history.

"If the Post Office Department could have received a proper allowance for the cost of carrying franked mail the postal surplus would have been much larger than is recorded, and this is true after deducting the expense incurred on account of the postal service by the Treasury Department for the free quartering of certain Post Offices in Federal buildings, an expense that is less than half the cost of the franking privilege. In the fiscal year 1912 more than 300,000,000 pieces of mail, having an aggregate weight of about 61,000,000 pounds, were carried free of charge under the franks of Congressmen and of the various Government establishments. It postage at the usual rates had been paid on this matter it is estimated that the postal revenues would have been increased by more than $20,000,000.

"In the last Administration we appealed in vain to a Democratic House for legislation abolishing the franking abuse. It is a subject that the present postal management might well consider, for it affords an opportunity to save the department millions of dollars a year. But, judging from the committee's report as published in the press, the gentlemen now in charge of postal destinies seem more interested in discloding the fact that during the four years preceding March 4 an average of thirty-four clerkships per annum remained vacant in the department.

Suggests Critics Tend to Business.

"The United States postal service comprises altogether more than 300,000 officers and men. It is the largest business organization in the world. It expends annually about $250,000,000 and now takes in approximately that amount in postal receipts. It requires a high order of business ability and the closest kind of application on the part of the various officers in charge to conduct successf

MISS FERRY WEDS AT ST. THOMAS'S

Chantry Is Crowded with Guests for Her Marriage to William de F. Manice.

MISS LAZO IS MARRIED

To John F. Steinman—Miss Sallie Van Zile Bride of Dr. Scott—Other June Weddings.

The chantry of St. Thomas's Church was crowded to the doors yesterday with guests at the wedding of William de Forest Manice, the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Manice, and Miss Harriet Ferry, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. Hayward Ferry.

The Rev. Dr. Ernest M. Stires, assisted by the Rev. Dr. Thayer of St. Mark's School, officiated, the ceremony taking place at 4 o'clock.

The bride, who walked with her father, was in an ivory white satin gown, with a coat effect, in old Milano lace that came almost to the skirt's hem at the front and sides. It was cut in a low V in the front and had elbow sleeves.

The court train was novel in that it was slung from the right shoulder in cavalier style, and a little below the waist line a fold of it was carried to the centre back, and thence it spread out in the regulation long, square effect. It was heavy ivory satin embroidered in orchid designs and pearls, and the entire train was edged with silver passementerie balls.

The tulle veil, that came to the end of the train, was arranged in cap fashion and was held with a half-wreath of orange blossoms. Her only ornament was a diamond brooch, the gift of Mr. Manice. She carried a sheaf bouquet of white orchids, touched with mauve.

The matron of honor, Mrs. Jay Gould, and the bridesmaids, the Misses Ursula Brown and Lisa Stillman, were gowned alike, in orchid-colored taffeta, short skirts, with shaded lilac chiffon coats, having revers of bluish chiffon. The hats were plateaus of lavender Crin, much longer from side to side than front to back, and these were tied down over the ears with irregular, old-time mauve ribbon streamers. Tied to one side of the back, under the front brim, next the hair, was a cluster of mauve orchids. Orchids were also caught under the brim at the back, the ribbon passing over the hats. Their flowers were large clusters of centaureas, flowers that look much like Scotch thistles, and shaded pink roses.

Miss Sarah Manice, the maid of honor, was in pinkish taffeta, veiled with shaded mauve chiffon; her lavender hat was trimmed with large pink roses, and she carried mauve orchids.

Mr. Manice's best man was Seth Barton French, 2d, son of Dr. John Herndon French and Mrs. French, and the ushers were William Jennings, Mary Willets, Arthur Gardner, F. Bayard Rives, W. Scott Pyle, Dewees D. Dilworth, Morgan J. O'Brien of New York, and C. Lawson Reed of Cincinnati.

The wedding reception was held at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Ferry, 26 West Sixty-sixth Street. Franko's orchestra played during the afternoon.

The bride and bridegroom received in a pergola of wistaria blossoms. Mrs. Ferry, who assisted, wore a gown of silver and gray brocade with a silver lace coat topped by a deep blue hat covered with blue bird of paradise plumes.

Mrs. Manice, the bridegroom's mother, also receiving, wore a cream taffeta veiled with cream net, topped by a smoke gray hat with feathers of the same color, and Mrs. Arthur Curtiss James, the bride's aunt, was in orchid pink moire trimmed with white lace, topped by a small black hat having a black aigrette.

The house decorations were wistaria, blue larkspur, and paeonies.

Mr. and Mrs. Manice have not yet decided upon their Summer plans.

The bride, who walked with her father, wore a short-trained robe of white satin crepe, having the bodice of tulle and rose point, with a high collar at the back of point lace, the front being cut out in a low V, and long, tight sleeves of tulle. Her point lace veil was one worn by her great-greatgrandmother at her nuptials, and was held by clusters of orange blossoms, with orange blossoms banding the beak of the head. Her bouquet of gardenias and white orchids was tied with tulle. The string of pearls worn was the gift of her father.

The bridesmaids were the Misses Caroline and Elizabeth Steinman, sisters of the bridegroom, and Caroline Franklin, all of Lancaster, and Miss Gean R. Stewart of New York.

Apply Intelligent Treatment to Constipation

CONSTIPATION seems to the ordinary person a very simple thing. He doesn't worry about it, takes any old remedy, and considers himself "relieved." The reason for this is that the many advertised articles try to impress upon the public how easy it is overcome with their product. One has a candy, another a tasteless tablet or a salt, and another a fountain syringe.

CONSTIPATION cannot be cured with a rubber hose, nor is every remedy good for your complaint. Your bowels should move every day, and they should move in the morning before your business day begins. There should be a quick action, without discomfort, and NO continuous reminders that you have taken something. There is such a remedy—a natural remedy, too—HUNYADI JANOS WATER; PURE, SURE and MILD. Take ½ glassful on an empty stomach; 16 ozs within an hour or so. Get a bottle at any Drug Store to-day.

DOG KILLS SQUIRREL IN HOTEL LOBBY

Flight of Little Wild Thing from Central Park Was Headed Off.

BRAVE FIGHT AGAINST ODDS

Curious Train of Events Follows Collision Between an Automobile and a Trolley Car.

An automobile came into collision with a trolley car in front of the Hotel Plaza yesterday, and the victim was a squirrel. As a matter of fact, the squirrel was not actually killed either by the automobile or the trolley car. Contact with a hungry bulldog which was waiting on a leash while his mistress ate her luncheon provided the poor little wild thing's finish; but this tragedy in the hotel lobby was the finale of a train of events that began with the mixup of the two vehicles outside the hotel.

It was exactly 2:50 P. M. by the self-registering chronometer that Assistant Manager Skinner carries in his left waistcoat pocket for the purpose of certifying for the newspapers events of importance, when a big limousine containing C. B. Alexander and two other men turned into Fifty-ninth Street from Fifth Avenue, and a few seconds later sought to remove from its pathway a crosstown car that was travelling leisurely eastward just in front of the main entrance of the Plaza. The automobile, or somebody in it, wanted to reach the entrance in a hurry, but as the vehicle turned, the trolley car happened to reach the spot, and the automobile, after butting the head of the car and finding it was hard enough to bend two lamps and smash a window, came to a stop. The two contestants for that space of street were separated without difficulty. Not so with two animals which later took up the quarrel.

In Central Park lived a squirrel. It was one of a fast diminishing family, whose life is made hideous by boys who, when the the little animals come to the Park wall to get the peanuts that more kindly disposed persons carry in their pockets, chase the little creatures and throw stones at them. A few youngsters had raised this squirrel yesterday just at the time that the trolley and the auto chose for their meeting, and the little animal ran across the street and into the crowd that soon collected, from which it quickly sought safety through the open doorway of the hotel. It was not the first time that a squirrel had taken a peep into the Plaza, but it was the first time one encountered a foe.

From the opening into the Fifty-ninth Street cafe came most pleasant odors, and thither turned the squirrel, all unknowing that, just now, that thoroughfare was closed to little wild things such as he, with a great Cerberus on guard, who for an hour or more had been cherishing a grudge against somebody because he was tied up there to a leash, and, with all those pleasant odors coming out, not allowed to sample the good things that produced them.

Down the narrow lane frisked the squirrel. A deep-throated challenge came from a fierce looking bulldog belonging to Miss Florence Malone of Brooklyn, who was taking luncheon inside with two friends. The squirrel turned. The dog sprang and the leash, which was only 6 ft. on a slipknot, pulled out. The maid at the hat stand shrieked. A pageboy yelled. The few persons who were trying the new Summer sofa covers jumped over and rushed first in one direction and then in another, and one credible witness avers that a woman jumped on a chair and questioned everybody to know whether that thing was a rat or just a big mouse.

Around the lobby flew the squirrel, the dog after it. Unfortunately the little creature missed the advantage the settee in the centre would have given it, and stuck to the floor. Just in front of the newsstand the squirrel was caught, and then it showed fight. The dog, trusting to its superior strength, after the first grab and shake, dropped the little animal, and the latter bit savagely at the dog's ear and actually took a small piece off. The squirrel scratched the bulldog's face as the latter sprang at it again. There was one pitiful little squeak, and a dead squirrel lay by the newsstand, and a savage looking dog with a gory mouth stood growling down at it.

There are several societies that go to great lengths to protect dogs.

SALVATION ARMY PARADE.

Miss Eva Booth on a Horse Leads the Marchers to Union Square.

The Congress of the Salvation Army will be brought to a close this morning when Miss Eva Booth, the Commander, will address a meeting of the officers. The marchers then proceeded to the headquarters at 122 West Fourteenth Street. There were nine bands in the parade.

Commander Booth addressed a big meeting at the headquarters at 8 o'clock, in which she told of the work her father, the late Gen. Booth, had done.

$42,000 for Englewood Hospital.

Special to The New York Times.

HACKENSACK, N. J., June 3.—The whirlwind campaign planned for the purpose of raising $125,000 to enlarge and improve the Englewood Hospital begins to-morrow. PRINCESS'S DOWRY $200,000

Ex-King Manuel and His Bride Will Have an Income of $30,000.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

PARIS, Wednesday, June 4.—Gil Blas this morning announces that Prince William of Hohenzollern will give his daughter, the Princess Augustine Victoria, who is engaged to ex-King Manuel, a dowry of $200,000.

The income of the young couple will amount to about $30,000. Though the ex-King may think this insufficient, says Gil Blas, his mother, Queen Amelie, is satisfied. She hopes her son and his wife will live quietly at Sigmaringen till the possible restoration of the monarchy in Portugal, upon which the Princess Augustine is said to have set her heart.

WON'T MARRY THE UNFIT.

Rev. Dr. Nehemiah Boynton Stands with Those Who Favor Eugenics.

Demanding that couples coming to him to be married be sound physically and morally, the Rev. Dr. Nehemiah Boynton, pastor of the Clinton Avenue Congregational Church, Brooklyn, and head of the National Council of Congregational Churches, announced yesterday that he would not marry any persons whom he believed to be unfit for marriage. He said:

"I believe that the marriage ceremony should be surrounded with proper safeguards, and I shall not marry a couple, either of whom I know to be morally or physically unfit. The bride's father should know whether the man who is to marry his daughter is good. I say this because I am a father, and for this reason I am in favor of the principle. The people who are interested primarily should take the first interest in seeing that those about to be married are fit to enter into that sacred relation.

"The minister is the guardian of the law and stands for morals and righteousness, but he is in no sense an officer of inquiry."

OVATION TO ACTOR-KNIGHT.

Audience Cheers Sir Johnston and Lady Forbes-Robertson.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, June 3.—When Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson appeared at Drury Lane to-night the audience showed its approval of the knighthood bestowed upon him by giving the actor an ovation which brought the play to a standstill for several minutes. A second outburst of cheering greeted Lady Forbes-Robertson's appearance on the stage. During the day the actor-knight received nearly a thousand messages of congratulation, among the senders being a Cabinet Minister and most of the prominent members of the theatrical profession.

Sir James M. Barrie, with his usual modesty, in order to avoid interviews, remained at home all day, abandoning his usual practice of going out for several hours.

KERNOCHAN MEDAL FOR RESCUE IN 1886

American Cross of Honor Men Send It and the Mayor Presents It

WITH REMARKS ON BRAVERY

The Magistrate, Then a Boy of 10, Saved a Woman from an Overturned Boat Down the Bay.

When City Magistrate Frederic Kernochan was about 10 years old, in 1886, he rescued a woman named Louise Valet from an overturned boat at Navesink Highlands. Congress, in the Cleveland Administration, gave him a silver medal for his bravery, and yesterday the American Cross of Honor, which is composed of those who have received medals from Congress, gave him another. The Mayor made the presentation at the City Hall, and said:

"To show how little we know of one another in a great city, especially in the way of anything good—the bad we find out quickly enough—I can say to you that I never heard of this matter, and I suppose it will be news to the vast majority of the people of the city, that you did this heroic act for which this medal is being presented.

"There are acts of bravery that take place as a matter of course, because they are in the line of duty and the one performing them is required to perform them. They are most commendable. But there are other acts of bravery that transcend those done in the line of duty, like a soldier on the field. They are voluntary and unselfish acts of bravery. They transcend all the others. And this act for which I present this medal, being voluntary on your part and not in the line of any prescribed duty, is all the higher and all the more commendable."

MAYOR AFTER END-SEAT HOG

Board of Aldermen Receive His Message on Subject with Laughter.

Mayor Gaynor started after the end seat hog yesterday. In a letter to the Aldermen he asked that something be done to make people who monopolize the end seats of the Summer surface cars move along, so that passengers will not have to climb over them. This was his message:

City of New York,
OFFICE OF THE MAYOR,
June 3, 1913.

To the Honorable, the Board of Aldermen: The habit of all selfish people, and especially if they be big and fat, is to take the end place on the seats of the Summer cars, which run crosswise of the car, and stick there, instead of moving along to the other end as other people get on the car. This causes great inconvenience. All those who come after these selfish people have to climb over their legs and press by them as best they can. I would suggest to you to consider whether you should not pass an ordinance making this selfish practice a misdemeanor, and requiring those who enter cars with cross seats to move as far in as there is a vacant space to sit down. The selfishness and hoggishness of some people in this matter is a distressing spectacle, to say nothing of the inconvenience which they cause, especially to mothers with little children.

W. J. GAYNOR, Mayor.

The message was received with laughter by the board and immediately Alderman Stapleton introduced a resolution designed to abate the nuisance which he had introduced in 1904, but which was killed in the then Committee on Railroads. It provides that any person who refuses upon request to change to a vacant seat nearer the inner side of the car shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $100 or imprisonment not exceeding six months, or both. The message and resolution was referred to the Committee on Laws and Legislation.

SUIT FOR AIDING NEPHEW.

Printers Want Huyler Estate to Pay Debt of T. J. Gaines, Jr.

The question whether a man can aid his favorite nephew in starting a business enterprise without becoming responsible for all the debts of the concern is being thrashed out in a suit before Supreme Court Justice Amend against the estate of John S. Huyler, the candy manufacturer, and his nephew, Thomas J. Gaines, Jr. The plaintiffs are the Wyncoop, Hallenbeck-Crawford Company, printers of Paris Modes, a magazine issued by young Gaines, in which Mr. Huyler lost nearly $250,000.

The printers are suing to recover $26,757.11, the amount owing to them when Paris Modes went into bankruptcy. In naming as co-defendants the executors of the estate, the plaintiffs assert that the extension of credit which they had granted the magazine was due to Mr. Huyler's support. Had it not been for the supposition that Mr. Huyler was "back of" the publication, they could never have been misled, they say, even by the high rating given the magazine by mercantile agencies. Edmund L. Mooney, lawyer for the Huyler estate, said in his opening argument:

"If this jury should hold the late John S. Huyler responsible for the debts contracted by this magazine, with which he was not connected, but which he helped to the extent of a quarter of a million dollars out of love for his favorite nephew, then it would mean that no man could help his nephew, or even his own son, in trying to start a business without becoming responsible for all the debts of the concern."

BIG SPUG DANCE ON A PIER.

Miss Morgan Witnesses 8,000 Vacation Girls in an Evening's Pleasure.

The word Spug in big electric light letters at the end of the recreation pier at East Twenty-fourth Street told the secret of the army of girls who filled it last evening. The Vacation Savings Fund girls, Miss Anne Morgan at the head to see that they had a good time, with their mothers and little sisters and friends, were opening the Summer season with a dance. The whole of the pier was thrown open to them, the street end being given over to a continuous moving picture show, while the other part was devoted to dancing and refreshments. There was a free lunch counter at the drinking fountain, where any one could have pure Croton for the drawing, but the restaurant counter, with ice cream, 10 cents, and lemon soda and sarsaparilla for 5 cents a bottle, including a straw, drew the crowd.

There were 8,000 of the vacation girls invited to come and bring their friends. Mrs. Mary Halpin, 63, "a widow this seven years," who used to be a prize dancer, she said, was the oldest dancer on the floor last night, dancing with a niece whom she had brought. No men were supposed to be invited, but there were a number of city officials, Dock Commissioner Smith's men, Capt. Sexton, the new Police Captain of the precinct; Commissioner of Recreation Johnson and R. G. Chomley-Jones of the Greenwich Neighborhood Association. Mrs. Richard Irvin, Miss Maud Westmore, Miss Evelyn Smith, and Mrs. Mary Hatch Willard were among others present.

Mrs. August Belmont was expected, but, being out of town, did not arrive.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Prices Recede Again After Firmness in Early Trading—Less Foreign Selling.

For a part of yesterday's Stock Exchange session prices showed firmness, but there was no sharp rebound from the heavy losses which were incurred on Monday. On the contrary, the market yielded again in the afternoon, although the volume of selling was much smaller than it had been the previous day, and enough new low prices were established to carry the average of quotations to a new low level. The foreign markets showed improvement, and buying and selling orders from abroad appeared to offset each other sufficiently closely to make the European participation in this market a much less important factor than it had been at the opening of the week. It seemed plain from the action of the market that sharp as had been the drop on Monday it had failed to call out a sufficient amount of buying to check the combined effect of liquidation, much of which has been directly related with the straining of credit to care for heavy issues of new securities, and of much bear pressure. Monday afforded an opportunity to many of those short of the market to cover at their ease, and many are believed to have profited by that opportunity. Further buying for the short account doubtless contributed to the moderate degree of strength which was shown in the early trading yesterday, but to the extent of which the short interest was thus reduced the market was left all the more open to fresh attack by the bears, and all the more vulnerable under renewed liquidation. This seemed sufficiently to account for the weakness which was shown at the close, for the volume of selling was at no time very heavy compared with the experience of the previous day.

The further hardening of time money rates yesterday was symptomatic of one set of conditions whose ramifications have been reflected in many quarters of the security markets. In part current interest rates are reflective of the strain to which credit has been put, and in part of the steps which bankers have been taking to correct that condition, and to put themselves in better position to meet the demands of the future. It is plain, and several recent incidents served to illustrate the point, that for a long time prior to the present large accumulation of undigested security issues the money markets were relied on to provide for many needs which should have been provided for in the capital market. Except for the most pressing requirements it is a wiser course when permanent capital cannot be obtained to postpone capital expenditures than to cover them by appeals to the short-time money market. Notes issued in lieu of permanent securities have proved the occasion of several of the most uncomfortable situations through which the security markets have passed. At the same moment, naturally enough, note issues are being practically confined to covering maturing obligations, but the inconvenience of providing for maturing issues in a money and security market such as we have lately been having suggests a lesson which should not be forgotten when borrowing again becomes easier. The enforced limitation of security issues to the filling of the most pressing requirements will gradually pave the way to a better investment situation. At the moment the absence of a normal relation between borrowing demand and capital supply offers the fundamental explanation of the conditions surrounding the security market.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

A Small Short Interest.

The further recession of security prices yesterday on the heels of Monday's broad decline caused many traders to carry away with them at the end of the session a decidedly gloomy outlook. The trend of quotations was of a sort to convince them that under the influence of hurried European selling of the previous day a tremendous amount of short covering had occurred. In fact, there were numerous close observers of market occurrences who were persuaded that the short account had been narrowed down to very small proportions. In proof of this view they pointed to the way stocks sold off without sign of even feeble rallies, to culminate in weakness at the close, which was more impressive than the weakness of any other period of the day. They argued that the only support accorded the market on Monday had come from a worried short interest, and that, while sales on the short side undoubtedly helped to melt prices down in yesterday's last hour, still the steadying influence of short covering in other quarters was entirely lacking to impart even a moderate degree of stability.

Trimming Off Prices.

There has been such poor support for the stock market in recent weeks that any deliberate selling movement, either in liquidation or the short interest, has depressed quotations regardless of values or other considerations. It is only necessary to decide on an issue, sell a few hundred or a thousand shares, and then wait a few moments for the execution of stop loss orders, after which it is usually possible to buy back the shares sold, with a profit of two or three points. At first the stocks subjected to attack were those occupying a weak technical position, such as the unseasoned industrials or those of the railroads expected to pass their dividends. In the past few days the selling has had the same effect in some of the high-priced stocks, concerning whose dividends there have been no unfavorable rumors. Canadian Pacific, American Telephone, Southern Pacific—whatever the stock, it has slumped off when its turn has come. Yesterday afternoon the selling was concentrated for a short while on Northern Pacific. From 118¼ the price shaded down to 110⅝, where it closed at the lowest point touched in several years. The peculiar aspect of the selling of Northern Pacific is that it followed on the heels of the publication of an excellent earnings statement for April and the ten months. There is no question of the company's ability to earn its dividend this year, although enormous sums have been put into maintenance. It looks as though the current year would see a surplus of about 8 per cent. earned on Northern Pacific shares. Mr. Elliott says that the stockholders will have a much better railroad than they had on June 30, 1912, as a result of the sums taken out of earnings to provide improvements.

Stocks Under New Tax Law.

Only two stocks listed on the Stock Exchange are affected by the amendment to the Stock Transfer Tax bill, recently signed by Gov. Sulzer, which directs that a tax of two cents a share shall be paid on all stock sold, irrespective of its par value. The issues are Great Northern Ore certificates and Adams Express shares, upon which no tax has been paid in the past because they had no specified par valuation.

Great Northern Ore certificates are trust receipts, while each share of Adams Express Company capital represents an interest of 120,000th part in a joint stock association. Before the tax measure was amended it called for a two-cent charge in the transfer of each share of stock having a par value of $100.

Let Gary Attend to Business.

The prosecution in the case of the Government against the Steel Corporation showed yesterday that, whatever evils it hopes to bring out in past operations of the trust, it has no intention of interfering with present routine matters of business. The weekly meeting of the Finance Committee was scheduled for the afternoon. Judge Gary was occupying the witness chair. He wished to attend the meeting, and in order that he might do so, the morning session of the hearing was continued a half hour longer than on former days, and reconvened a half-hour later.

D. & R. G. Doing Well.

Chairman Jeffery of the Denver & Rio Grande Railroad Company said yesterday that he estimated that the surplus of the road this year, after meeting all interest charges, except what it may have to contribute toward Western Pacific first mortgage bond interest, would be about $1,700,000. The company is free from floating debt. The free treasury assets shown in the last annual report are all intact, according to Chairman Jeffery. At the end of the first ten months the Denver & Rio Grande had a surplus of $1,257,000, as compared with the $532,000 earned in the corresponding period of last year.

Investment Begins at Home.

Some security issues, like prophets, are not without honor save in their own country. A speech delivered in London recently, prior to the Frisco trouble, by a former Chancellor of the Exchequer might have served a more useful purpose had it been delivered before the recent flotation of some rather questionable securities abroad. The speaker, Lord St. Aldwyn, said that during his tenure of office as Chancellor he had sold upward of $450,000,000 of British consols at about 18 points higher than they could be sold for now. He entertained a firm belief that in these matters the world went through a cycle of years, and that the day would come again when the public would discover, as it had discovered in past times, that the security offered by half-civilized countries under unsettled governments was not quite so good as the security that it could get at home, and when that lesson had been forcibly impressed upon it by some financial catastrophe abroad then would come the time for the revival of those gilt-edged securities which are now fallen on evil days. Lord Aldwyn said that the coming of that day would be accelerated if the English bankers were less ready to flood the market with new adventures, the high rate of interest on which is their claim to attention.

Want Ancillary 'Frisco Receiver.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., June 3.—Counsel for J. L. Driver and Mrs. Driver of Memphis applied to-day in the Federal Court for the appointment of an ancillary receiver for the St. Louis & San Francisco Railroad and the property belonging to the Kansas City and Memphis Bridge Company. Claim is made in the bill that the railroad company is indebted to the Drivers to the amount of $4,000 for damages rendered them in January, 1912, and that the debt remains unpaid. The motion will be argued on Saturday.

IN THE BUSINESS WORLD

Rubber Buying Fair at London.

Buyers were fairly active at the fortnightly auction of crude rubber in London yesterday, and 310 of the 1,000 tons of plantation grades which were offered were disposed of. Prices on pale crepe were reported at 2s 1¾d, while smoked sheets were held at 2s 2½d. Pale crepe at this time last year sold at 2s 10½d. Prices at the last previous sale were 2s 2½d and 2s 4¾d, respectively. The opening prices of yesterday touched the previous low record for these grades, made on April 15. Upriver fine, which was very scarce here, was nominally quoted at 91 cents.

Boston Club Arouses Interest.

Manufacturers and importers showed considerable interest yesterday in the report from Boston telling of the formation of the Millennium Club in that city. The club's membership is made up of women. The members have pledged themselves to refrain from wearing kid gloves, leather shoes, slippers, and belts. They will wear no aigrettes, wings, or quills; in short, they will have nothing to do with any article that is produced by the torture or death of a living thing. They will eat no meat. Silk and cotton gloves will supplant kid, cloth shoes will be worn, and artificial flowers and ribbons will decorate the hats of the members. No shell combs will be worn.

How a Business Name Is Watched.

There is a firm of candy manufacturers in this city which is so jealous of the good name of its business and the reputation of its product that it maintains a "diplomacy corps." The duties of the men in this corps are to investigate all complaints, correct all errors, and do everything possible to keep the public eating the firm's candy. Not long ago one of the investigators personally delivered a pound box of candy to a woman living in an up-State city who had complained to the firm that the candy she had bought from a retailer there was stale at the time she got it. To prevent its candy from getting stale in the hands of the retailers the firm has an elaborate system of regulating sales.

Wheat Exports Decline Sharply.

Exports of wheat from New York last week declined sharply. The total was 850,961 bushels, nearly 700,000 bushels less than the total of the week before. Shipments of beef also showed a marked decline. The total exports of the week, exclusive of specie, amounted to $13,276,960 in value, compared with $12,867,087 for the same week in 1912. The 1913 total to date is $414,439,676.

Hard Coal Orders Fall Off.

The Coal Trade Journal, in its issue of to-day, will say:

"The opening days of June have been marked by a lull in the demand for anthracite, following a spurt last week which represented the desire of retailers to get their orders accepted at the May circular. The greater part of the eleventh-hour buying, however, was entered as June business, and with other orders carried over from May will insure full-time operation at the collieries during the first half of the current month.

"The bituminous market is firm, having suffered no reverses in the last week. Coal of all grades is in limited supply at the loading ports."

THOMSON IN JARVIS'S PLACE

New Yorker Chosen President of the American Hardware Corporation.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW BRITAIN, Conn., June 3.—Directors of the American Hardware Corporation to-day chose Henry C. Thomson of Hodgson Brothers Company of New York as President to succeed Col. Charles M. Jarvis, resigned.

Mr. Thomson, who was graduated from Yale in 1898, is an experienced hardware man. For several years he represented P. & F. Corbin as a salesman in the Middle West, afterward becoming Western manager. He has been with Hodgson Brothers Company ten years.

Less centralisation of authority will be the programme of the new President, who will give the managers of the plants that comprise the corporation more latitude.

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

The United States Court of Customs Appeals has sustained a protest made by Alexander W. Murphy & Co. relative to the classification under the Tariff act of 1909 of machines for making jute yarn, assessed 45 per cent. ad valorem under Paragraph 199, as manufactures of metal not specially provided for. The importers contended for 30 per cent. under the provision for jute manufacturing machinery. The Board of General Appraisers sustained the importers.

The court affirmed the general board in holding that meat-slicing machines imported by Gallagher & Ascher are not machine tools dutiable at 30 per cent. within the meaning of the act of 1906. The assessment at 45 per cent. ad valorem under Paragraph 198, as manufactures of metal not specially provided for, stands.

The board sustained a contention by F. W. Myers & Co. regarding cedar poles assessed by the Collector at Plattsburg, N. Y., at 10 per cent. ad valorem under Paragraph 204, act of 1909, as telephone poles. Free entry was asked under Paragraph 712 for round, unmanufactured timber.

SIDELIGHTS ON SELLING.

One of the oddities of the present fashion in footwear is that no high toes are shown in high-grade shoes for women, in the cheaper and medium grades, rising up to $4, high toes are commonly seen.

Warp prints, softened by use, with plain colors, will have a fairly good place among the silks which will be popular this Fall. In some of them the futurist influence is seen.

There is an idea in the local underwear trade that opening prices on those goods for the coming wholesale season will not be high. It is said that the manufacturers will probably introduce their lines at figures that will insure good advance business, leaving the profit to advance when duplicate orders begin to come in.

CONSULAR TRADE NOTES.

Statistics of the cream and ice cream trade in 24 Canadian cities, collected in 1912, show that the manufacture of ice cream in these cities turned up a record of that year of 1,800,000 pounds of butter, or over 4,000,000 pounds of cheese. This estimate takes no account of the hundreds of similar smaller businesses in the various towns of the Dominion. The managers of these ice cream establishments report that their trade in 1913 showed an increase of 10 per cent. over 1912, notwithstanding that a phenomenally cool season.

The number of new German corporation companies, on account of the difficulty of raising capital for their development, have opened negotiations with the potash syndicate looking to a suspension of work.

The Live Stock Department of Argentina has authorized the introduction into that country of 300 goats which are being imported from Europe for the municipality of Buenos Aires. They will be placed in care of the zoological gardens, where they will be looked after and tested for their economic value as milk suppliers.

J., by the Simpson-Crawford Company for $1,000, and part of her assets in New Jersey were attached in that suit.

NEVADA-UTAH MINES AND SMELTERS CORPORATION.—Judge Holt has affirmed the order of Referee Olmsted in bankruptcy, allowing the claims of L. Vogelstein & Co. for $38,000 and of C. J. Caughey for $16,977 against the Nevada-Utah Mines and Smelters Corporation of 100 Broadway, against which concern a petition in bankruptcy was filed on Nov. 22, 1911.

Ward, receiver of Rector's, which formerly operated the hotel and restaurant at Broadway and Forty-fourth Street, has obtained from Judge Hand an order for the examination of Charles E. TO TRAIN SOUTH AMERICANS

Boys Coming Here Ultimately May Increase Export Business.

Under the auspices of the Pan-American States Association, one hundred young men are coming this Fall from South and Central America to enter famous manufacturing establishments in this country. They will endeavor to learn the industries with which they are associated, and at the same time will try to give hints to the manufacturers which will help them to increase their export trade to South American countries. The business students in turn will learn how to sell goods, and when their course of instruction is ended they return to their homes ready to help in the expansion of American trade. The expenses of the journey here will be paid for the boys.

Each manufacturer taking one of these boys into his plant will make his own selection, and will pay the boy what he earns. Each boy will have had adequate and special schooling before he arrives.

Eleven young men from the southern countries are already here under similar arrangement. Four hundred more young men ultimately will follow those who are expected to arrive by Sept. 1.

The plan originated with the oldest exporter of New York, Kaufman Mandell, now retired. Mr. Mandell feels, as do all interested in the movement, that the results will be far-reaching. It is hoped to get a larger share for the United States of the business of the southern countries.

HEINZE'S $149,825 VERDICT.

Court Rules It Should Be Deducted from Bank's Claim of $300,000.

Argument on the interpretation of a verdict for $149,825 given by a jury to F. Augustus Heinze, after a trial before Justice Clark in the Supreme Court, Brooklyn, of a suit brought against Heinze by the defunct Union Bank to recover $300,000, was heard yesterday before that court. At the trial Heinze admitted, after Justice Clark threw out of the case several notes the bank presented against the defendant, that he owed the institution $195,451.74. At the conclusion of the argument yesterday Justice Clark decided that the amount of the verdict of the jury in favor of Heinze should be deducted from his indebtedness to the bank, and directed a judgment in favor of the bank for $45,624.74.

The action of the bank against Heinze was to recover on several notes given for loans. Heinze filed a counter-claim against the bank for $250,000, which he said represented a depreciation in the value of the collateral he gave the bank, because it was sold contrary to an agreement he had with the institution. He said the collateral was not sold at a time when he wanted it disposed of.

Max Steuer, attorney for Heinze, took exception to the ruling of the court. The defendant claimed that he should receive judgment against the bank for the full amount of the verdict of the jury. Rufus C. Catlin, attorney for the bank, dissatisfied with the outcome of the suit, said an appeal would be taken.

J. G. WHITE & CO. PROSPER.

Earn 11.7 Per Cent. and Set Aside $504,892 Against Shrinkage.

The net income of J. G. White & Co. in the year ended on Feb. 28, 1913, was $296,647, after a reserve fund of $304,892 had been set aside from earnings to offset declines in securities owned and to cover possible depreciation of this sort in the coming year.

The usual 6 per cent. dividend was paid on the preferred stock, the balance of profits being carried to the surplus account. This balance was equivalent to about 11.7 per cent. on the common stock.

The balance sheet showed aggregate assets of $4,843,843, including $474,178 cash, securities valued at $2,167,774, and bills receivable amounting to $626,419. Undivided profits were set forth as $728,160.

READY FOR ORPHANS' AUTOMOBILE DAY

Final Details Arranged for Outing of 4,000 To-morrow--Cars Needed--Berkshire Routes.

Final preparations are being made for Orphans' Automobile Day to-morrow, and banners and identification numbers have been assigned to the various institutions which will send children to the outing at Glen Island, New Rochelle. The undertaking has assumed such large proportions that those in charge of it have been ceaselessly busy during the last few days in making sure that all things were arranged. Considerably more than 4,000 children will take part in the big automobile parade from Central Park West to the scene of the picnic, and with such a gathering of youngsters the marshals and committee men are looking forward to the busiest kind of a day.

Although arrangements were practically completed last night, the car question was still worrying the members of the Orphans' Automobile Day Association somewhat. Several cars which had been promised will not be available, and it is hoped that any one who desires to contribute his automobile for the use of the children will communicate to-day with the association's headquarters at 1,790 Broadway.

Some idea of the conditions of the roads between New York and the Berkshires may be gained from the experience of J. W. Gogarn of "Automobile Row," who returned yesterday from a three days' trip to Litchfield, Conn., Bantam Lake, and the Berkshire country. He reports the roads in much better condition, on the whole, than they were last Autumn. The State road through Danbury, Litchfield, and Torrington, Conn., has been rebuilt to New Preston and Lake Waramaug. Except for one or two unimportant detours made necessary by sandy stretches, the roads from Danbury to Litchfield and Bantam Lake by way of New Milford are in excellent condition.

From New York to Danbury the roads are being rebuilt, and one would avoid many unpleasant detours if he knew well, according to Mr. Gogarn, to go by way of Elmsford, East View, Pleasantville, Mount Kisco, Bedford, Cross River, and North Salem. By this rute new macadam or other hard surfaces may be followed most of the way, and the gently rolling country and fine scenery make the run delightful. Motorists are cautioned not to go by way of Kensico or Armonk, since the roads are badly torn up between these places and White Plains. The route to Danbury by way of Mount Kisco, Katonah, Golden's Bridge, Somers, Brewster, and Mill Plain, is in good condition save for a short stretch south of Golden's Bridge.

According to the report of the Commissioners of Fairmount Park, Philadelphia, on the work during 1912, there are now in the park forty-three miles of drives, forty-four miles of foot paths, and twelve miles of bridle paths. The growth of automobile traffic, says the report, has made the cost of using macadam roads in the park prohibitive, and, therefore, seven miles of bituminous surface have been laid in the centre of the East River Drive and at other points, leaving a ten-foot macadam driveway on each side of this strip. The report says that in 1899, the first year the park was open to automobiles, 696 motor vehicles passed through it, while last year the number was 900,000.

The Executive Committee of the Motor Dealers' Contest Association held a meeting yesterday. For the present, at least, there appears to be little enthusiasm for the construction of a motor speedway near New York by the association.

The Governors of the International Travel Club have elected Frederick H. Elliott, former Secretary of the American Automobile Association and the Touring Club of America, General Secretary of the club. He succeeds Cyril Oskar Assmus, resigned.

NICKEL PROFITS GROW.

Assets Increased and Earnings Equal 11.8 Per Cent. on Stock.

The International Nickel Company earned profits of $5,020,805 in the fiscal year ended on March 31, after meeting interest charges and making liberal appropriations to the sinking fund and depreciation accounts. Of this amount $634,755 was required to pay preferred dividends, and the balance, applicable to the common stock, was $4,435,550, or the equivalent of 11.8 per cent. on the outstanding common shares. In the previous year the surplus after preferred dividends, fixed charges, and depreciation reserves, amounted to $3,581,960.

President Monell informed stockholders in the annual report, issued yesterday, that in the course of the year the company's entire bond indebtedness had been retired. Business showed a substantial growth, he said, owing to an increased demand for nickel among the steel companies.

The balance sheet showed properties valued at $44,435,043, in contrast with $26,197,764 at the close of the preceding year. Total assets were set forth as $54,140,706, including $4,442,664 cash, against $7,854,177 cash in the statement for 1911.

COMMODITIES MARKETS

Wheat regained the losses of the early part of the session and closed ¾ to ⅞c net higher. Corn closed firm and from ⅞ to 1⅛c. net higher and oats final prices were ¾ to ⅞c net higher. Cotton closed barely steady at a net decline of 9 to 10 points. Cottonseed oil prices were about the low of the day at the close, and 5 to 12 points lower.

WHEAT.

Early developments in the wheat market had a bearish trend, and prices during the forenoon sold off ⅛@⅜c per bushel. This was in response to depression abroad, reports of further rains in Kansas, and a bearish weekly foreign crop review. Selling became quite aggressive, and the market appeared to have very little support, with sentiment inclined to be more bearish on the idea that the Kansas outlook should materially improve with the rains. That the market was still very nervous, however, and sensitive to bullish crop news was shown in the last hour, when in response to complaints about low temperatures again in the Canadian Northwest the market turned suddenly strong and, regaining its early losses, closed ⅛c to ¾c net higher. The late buying movement was also influenced by large seaboard clearances and a rather bullish construction placed upon the weekly Government weather report. Most of the foreign markets came lower, Liverpool closing ¼d to ½d off, Paris ⅛c down, Berlin and Budapest unchanged, and Antwerp ⅛c to ¼c lower. Part of this depression was due to the more favorable European crop outlook. In world's stocks there was a decrease for the week of 2,579,000 bushels, compared with 6,398,000 bushels decrease for the corresponding week last year. The European visible increased 2,026,000 bushels, but there was a decrease in American and Canadian stocks of 4,579,000 bushels. No fresh export business was reported, but sales of 35 loads worked at outports late Monday came to light. One of the big Chicago commission houses issued an estimate of 504,000,000 bushels of Winter wheat and 240,000,000 bushels of Spring wheat, figuring the latter area as 6 per cent. under last year. No. 1 Northern Duluth in the local market was quoted at $1.00½, free on board, afloat.

CORN.

Throughout the entire day corn showed a remarkably firm undertone, and in the afternoon sold up 1¼c on the July position, which was in demand from shorts and commission houses. The whole market closed very firm and from ⅞ to 1¼c net higher. Although receipts at interior points were over a million bushels, the Eastern cash demand was liberal. Bulls appeared ready to support the market on any signs of weakness and it responded easily to their buying. Export corn in the local market was quoted entirely nominal at 66½c free on board, afloat. At Liverpool there was a decline of ⅛ to ¼d for the day.

OATS.

The market for oats showed little change early in the session, but developed a firm undertone during the afternoon with other markets and closed ¼ to ⅜c net higher. The movement was heavy at interior points and with more favorable crop news tended to weaken sentiment somewhat. At New York cash oats were firm, closing as follows: Standard white, 40¾c; No. 2 white, 47¼c; No. 3 white, 45¾c; No. 4 white, 46½c; No. 2 white, 45¼c; ordinary clipped white, 45¼ to 46¾c; fancy clipped white, 47¼ to 47¾c, all elevator.

PROVISIONS.

On account of big receipts and generally lower hog markets, provisions declined quite sharply during the forenoon, with commission house selling a feature. The steadiness of grain caused a covering movement in the last hour, which rallied the market. Total Western receipts were 132,000 hogs, of which 18,000 were at Chicago, 21,000 at Kansas City, and 24,000 at Omaha. Chicago expected 35,000 hogs on Wednesday.

COTTON.

The cotton market was easier yesterday, losing practically all it had gained on the bullish official condition figures of Monday, and closing barely steady, at a net decline of 9 to 10 points. Trading was not particularly active, and for a time the market seemed to be fluctuating between the low June condition report and generally favorable weather in the South, but prices gradually eased off and reached the lowest level of the day in the late trading, when active new-crop months sold within 4 or 5 points of Monday's low levels.

The opening was steady, at unchanged prices to an advance of 3 points, on scattered covering and relatively steady cables. Liverpool seemed to be buying new-crop months on hints, but was a seller of July. After showing a loss of 4 or 5 points the market rallied 2 or 3 points on the weekly report of the Weather Bureau, which proved rather less favorable than expected, but a moderate flurry of covering was followed by renewed weakness, owing to good crop accounts from the Southwest and the failure of demand to improve on the buying. Closing prices were the lowest of the day.

Private cables reported Continental buying in Liverpool on the low June condition figures, but one of the prominent Liverpool firms advised sales on strong markets, and the foreign buying of new-crop positions here seemed to be offset by accompanying sales of old-crop months. The Southern selling attracted considerable attention, and tended to create an optimistic view of the new-crop outlook, notwithstanding the weekly weather report, which complained of insufficient rainfall in Oklahoma, Missouri, and parts of the Eastern belt, notably South Carolina. Southern spot markets, as officially reported, were unchanged. New Orleans and several other Southern markets were closed, owing to the holiday.

The local market for spot cotton was quiet, and 10 points lower, at 11.70c for middling upland; sales nil.

The range of contract prices in the local market was as follows:

COTTONSEED OIL.

Liquidation was rather active in the oil market yesterday, induced by the weakness of lard and the sharp break in cotton. Room shorts and refiners were the chief buyers on the decline, but failed to check the heaviness and last prices were 5 to 12 points net lower, and about bottom for the day.

COFFEE.

After showing a slightly steadier tone early, the coffee market again established low records, closing only slightly above bottom on a net loss of 10 to 15 points. Total sales, 74,500 bags. Cost and freight offers from Brazil declined 5 to 12½ points. European markets were fairly steady. Rio was 200 reis lower, and Santos unchanged. Spot market dull and weak; 7000 for Rio 7s.

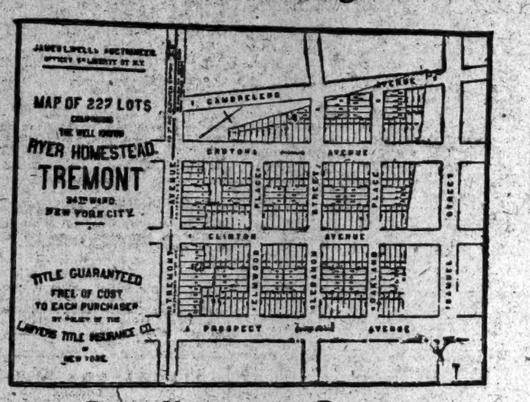
Morris Park Race Track Auction Sale

Authorized by State of New York Banking Department

Yesterday up to 9 p. m.

954 Lots Were Sold at an Average of $1,126 per Lot

The Prices Ranged From $700 to $1,500 per Lot



Ryer Homestead Property

At the above sale, the lots sold for $700 to $1,500 each—Same as Yesterday at Morris Park

Ryer Homestead Neighborhood Today
Value of Lots $5,000 to $15,000 each

$500 invested at the Ryer Homestead Sale after paying all charges, produced $4,375 in 13 years, or at the rate of 59 6/10% per annum

At the present range of prices, $500 invested in the lots now being sold at Morris Park must show much better results as the subway is coming within 2 years

To Home Seekers:

This is a fine opportunity for you to buy a lot and build your own home. In a few years the increase in the value of your lot will pay for your house. The streets have been ceded to the city and the assessment paid for the trunk sewer.

The remainder of assessments will be light owing to the streets being practically on grade, and can be paid in ten annual installments. In two years you will have a five-cent fare to any part of Greater New York.

The increase in values should be as large as it was in the lower Bronx when the Subway started running there, which was about 300% in four months.

Your children will have the benefit of the magnificent Parks and Parkways and plenty of space to play in. Many of the streets are fully improved with sidewalks, water, gas, etc.

DANGLES BY AN ARM SEVEN STORIES UP

Painter on Falling Scaffold Grabs the Broken Rope While Comrade Falls.

Both Were Painting the Alpha Delta Phi Club Wall—Lambs Club Extension Saves One from Death.

For fifteen minutes yesterday, while a crowd of fully 1,500 persons in the street below gaped up at him, momentarily expecting to see him fall, Leo Kraft, a painter, of 417 East Sixty-fifth Street, hung by a raveling strand of rope seven stories above the street, swaying in the wind against the east wall of the Alpha Delta Phi Clubhouse, at 126 West Forty-fourth Street, while his fellow-workman was lying in a heap and breathing his last four stories below.

Kraft and his foreman, Gus Trolin of 983 Summit Avenue, the Bronx, had been painting that wall, when, without any warning, the thick rope that held up the heavy painter's scaffold at Trolin's end snapped. Trolin shot down, head foremost, toward the street, but landed on his shoulders near the very edge of the roof of the Lambs' addition, a three-story building, between the Lambs Club and the Alpha Delta Phi Clubhouse. His paint bucket and Kraft's came down as he lay there, and a moment later the heavy scaffold itself crashed down, rebounded from the edge of the cornice, and fell across his body, rendering him unconscious.

Kraft was near the middle of the scaffold when the rope at Trolin's side of it parted, and the heavy ladder sagged at that end. He managed to rush up an incline on the sagging scaffold toward the other end, but had not quite reached that when, snapped by the falling weight, the rope there too parted and the ladder lurched from under him, to fall upon his more unfortunate fellow workman on the roof below.

Somehow Kraft contrived by a great leap to catch with one hand at the swiftly receding rope end and to cling to it.

Then, as the ladder shot downward, he pulled himself with mighty and painful labors slowly upward, dangling there against the wall of the clubhouse, and succeeded, with a final wrench, in thrusting one arm through an iron brace that had held the treacherous loop of rope on which the scaffold had rested.

Warned by the cries of the quickly gathered crowd in the street outside that something was amiss, several members of the Alpha Delta Phi Club had thrust their heads out of windows and followed the gaze of the crowd. Two of the club members climbed through fourth floor windows of the clubhouse to the roof of the Lambs' addition building, and there found Trolin, beneath the fallen scaffold, and covered with the spilled paint. Ignorant of the fact that another besides Trolin had figured in the accident, and that Kraft was still dangling perilously at the end of his rope above them, the two men lifted Trolin across the roof and into the window of the clubhouse, and then took him downstairs, where a call was sent in for an ambulance.

Only then, apprised by the cries of the crowd outside, did the club members discover that Kraft, too, had figured in the accident. He was still hanging with his arm thrust through the iron brace, swaying slowly to and fro within a few inches of the clubhouse wall, level with the seventh floor of the building. It seemed that he might be forced at any moment to relinquish his hold and be hurled to the street below.

Fellow workmen who had been painting elsewhere in the building went up to the roof, about twenty feet above where Kraft hung, and lowered another rope with a running noose. In this they caught him and held him fast, and then only did they dare to pull up the broken painters' rope to which he clung. Just as they rescued him firemen appeared in a buggy from Headquarters, where a call had been sent for ladders.

Trolin was removed in an ambulance to the Flower Hospital, where he died. Kraft had dislocated his shoulder and was badly bruised. He was taken home in a taxicab.

ROSE WINS IN LOS ANGELES.

Candidate, Largely Backed by the Socialists, Is Elected Mayor.

LOS ANGELES, June 3.—Incomplete returns from 365 precincts indicate that to-day's municipal election resulted in a victory for Harry H. Rose, Independent candidate for the Mayoralty over John W. Rose was heavily supported by Socialists.

COAL TAX BILL IS PASSED.

Pennsylvania Will Take Two and a Half Per Cent. at Mines.

HARRISBURG, Penn., June 3.—The State Senate passed finally to-day the House bill taxing anthracite coal 2½ per cent. on the value of each ton at the mines, or approximately 5 cents a ton. It is estimated that if the bill becomes a law the revenue derived will be about $5,000,000, of which half will go to the nine anthracite counties in which the tax is levied and the other half will go into the general fund of the State.

KILLS HER SON-IN-LAW.

Woman Shoots After He Breaks Two Doors to Reach Her.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW LONDON, June 3.—Thomas Coatchelly, a candy and ice cream merchant, who until recently had a store in Bank Street, was shot dead by his mother-in-law, Mrs. Lillian M. Perkins, at 9 o'clock this afternoon. The tragedy occurred on a farm owned by Mrs. Perkins in Gales Ferry, a mile north of the Yale crews' training quarters. The victim was 33 years old. He married Mrs. Perkins's daughter, Ida, three years ago.

Mrs. Perkins formed a dislike for her son-in-law soon after the marriage, and a few months ago a legal battle between them over $500 Coatchelly had advanced for furniture led to hostilities. The son-in-law went to San Antonio, leaving his wife and her mother on the farm. He returned from Texas recently, and, meeting his wife in New London to-day, informed her that he was going to visit the farm and see his baby, which was born in December when he was in the Southwest. Coatchelly's wife warned him that her mother would shoot him. He placed his hand on his hip pocket and replied: "Two can play at that game."

Admittance to the farmhouse was denied to the man. Mrs. Perkins shook her fist at him behind a window. He broke down the outer and inner doors and was met inside the house with a double-barreled shotgun in the hands of his mother-in-law, who pulled the triggers. Coatchelly fell across the hall, his heart riddled with buckshot.

Mrs. Perkins immediately telephoned to the Sheriff in Norwich that she had killed her son-in-law, and Patrolman Brown was sent for her. She was released on a five-thousand-dollar bond.

SUIT OVER TRAIN'S SUCTION.

Damages of $100,000 Asked from P. R. R. for Lewis C. Green's Death.

Based on the contention that Lewis C. Green, a banker of Norwalk, Conn., lost his life by the suction resulting from a swiftly moving train, Lucius M. Green, an executor of the estate of the banker, brought suit yesterday against the Pennsylvania Railroad Company before Judge Adams in the Supreme Court Circuit in Newark for $100,000.

Green was killed on the platform of the Elizabeth station of the railroad June 1, 1911. He had attended a wedding party in Elizabeth and was waiting for the arrival of his train for New York on his way home.

George W. Glaze of the New York bar, who is conducting the case of the plaintiff, declared in his opening address that evidence would be introduced to prove that as the Federal express, one of the fastest trains on the road, passed the station at a rate of at least sixty miles an hour, the decedent was caught in the suction swirl and thrown heavily to the platform floor.
